Slave Case Conviction Pulls Fine, 'Back Pay'

SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 29—(AP)—Mrs. Alfred Wesley Ingalls was fined $2,500 in Federal Court here Tuesday and placed on five years' probation with a provision she make restitution to Negro Maid Dora Jones, whom she was convicted of enslaving.

Judge Jacob Weinberger suspended a three-year prison sentence in granting the probation.

He accepted a recommendation of U. S. Deputy Atty. Eugene A. Tolin that Dora Jones, whom Mrs. Ingalls was convicted July 19 of enslaving, be reimbursed in the amount of $6,000.

Tolin said the Negro woman, whom he described as "not holding ill will," had accepted the $6,000 as fair. She is now in St. Louis, Mo., with a brother.

At Deadend in Straw Case, Police Admit

HOLDERNESS, N. H., July 29—(UP)—Snowed under by what they called a "blizzard of clues," authorities admitted Tuesday they had reached a deadend in the eight-day-old search for missing heiress Anne Straw.

"We've been handicapped by a regular blizzard of useless tips and so-called leads," a police spokesman said. "As a result we don't know where to start. All we know at present is that the girl is missing."

Latest "tip" in the case of the missing heiress came from New York City, where police received a telephone call from a woman who claimed to be Anne Straw.

"I am Anne Straw. I am not dead or missing, and I do not want to be annoyed by further publicity," police quoted the caller.

The caller told New York Detective Alexander Kaplan she was living in "the Times Square area," agreed to write her distraught parents and then hung up.

Sadfaced, Truman Returns to Tasks at Capital

WASHINGTON, July 29—(UP)—President Truman returned to the White House Tuesday to finish the tasks he left undone three days ago when death summoned him to the bedside of his 94-year-old mother in Grandview, Mo.

The President, his face etched in sorrow over the loss of the devoted Mrs. Martha Ellen Truman, landed at National Airport in his private plane at 4:15 p. m.

He went immediately to the Executive Mansion, where he was greeted by the entire staff. Then, according to Press Sec. Charles Ross, he retired to his office to "dig into the bills which are on his desk."

Mr. Truman left here Saturday a few hours before the first session of the Eightieth Congress adjourned. He signed the Army-Navy Unification Bill and announced the appointment of Navy Sec. James Forrestal as the first Secretary of Defense under it, at the airport.

Dutch Planes Down Medical Transport

BATAVIA, Java, July 29—(AP)—American-built Dutch fighter planes strafed Republican Airfields on Java Tuesday, a Republican communique said as the Jogjakarta radio announced nine persons, including three British citizens, were killed when an Indian transport plane bringing medical supplies to the Indonesians was shot down.

The Dutch strafing attacks apparently were in swift retaliation for an Indonesian one-plane attack upon Dutch-held Semarang.

The Republican communique said two Dutch P-40s strafed the Jogjakarta Airfield, then attacked the Soerakarta Airfield 30 miles northeast of the Republican capital. The Republicans said the same two planes killed two persons when they strafed the Central Javanese village of Klaten.

Forrestal Confers With Armed Service Officials

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—James V. Forrestal, newly designated Secretary of Defense, held a closely guarded conference with armed service officials in the Army's big Pentagon Building Tuesday, and later declined to discuss the session.

Refusing to answer questions on emerging, Forrestal told a reporter he attended in his capacity as Secretary of the Navy. Although appointed by President Truman and confirmed by the Senate, Forrestal has not yet been sworn in as Secretary of the unified forces.

Those attending the conference included Secretary of War Kenneth Royall; Fleet Adm. William Leahy, President Truman's Chief of Staff; and Adm. William H. P. Blandy, Chief of the Atlantic Fleet.

Carpenter To Manage Constitution's WCON

David Carpenter, a native of Catlettsburg, Ky., has been appointed General Manager of Radio Station WCON by the management of The Atlanta Constitution.

He will assume his new duties Aug. 15 and will assemble the staff and equipment for the new radio station which is expected to go on the air in early December. WCON is the new 5,000-watt station which will be operated by The Constitution, with a wave length of 550 kilocycles.

Carpenter, who is 37, has been General Manager of Station WINR in Binghamton, N. Y., since July 1946, and prior to that, Vice-President and General Manager of WKNE, in Keene, N. H. He has had experience with several other stations in the East.

His first radio experience came in 1928 when he broadcast over WBRE at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Carpenter is a member of the Advertising Club of Boston, the Radio Executive Club of New York, the Binghamton Country Club and was Chairman of the 1947 Binghamton Red Cross Campaign. He attended school at Western Reserve Academy, Hudson, Ohio, and Wyoming Seminary, Kingston, Pa.

His wife is the former Miss Adele Baggett, of Tennessee, and they have three children, John Franklin, 7, Constance, 5, and David Wilder Carpenter, 4.

Shoeprints Link Youth To Attacks

The photographic memory of a policeman who spotted the design on tennis shoes worn by a passing Negro was credited by police Tuesday with bringing about an arrest expected to end the reign of terror on Atlanta's South Side.

Patrolman W. D. Eblen arrested James Ward Sims, of a Main Street address Monday midnight when he caught sight of the shoes.

The 16-year-old Negro Tuesday confessed to five crimes on the South Side, including the beating of a 73-year-old nurse at her Richardson Street, S. E., residence, police claimed. He denied criminally assaulting the woman.

The youth was linked with all the crimes because of tracks left by his tennis shoes, police said. Perfect prints were found when he allegedly burglarized a house at 271 Milledge Ave., S. E., and struck its woman occupant, police reported.

Eblen remembered police photographs of those prints when the boy passed him Monday midnight. Detectives said prints from Sims' shoe tracks matched tracks photographed at the Milledge Avenue address.

Further investigation revealed that Sims had escaped from the Fulton County Training School for Boys June 27.

Also taken into custody with Sims was Bennie Eddie McDonald, 26, Scott's Crossing, Route 7, who was on Pryor Street at the same time as Sims. McDonald was allowed to go home after questioning but was re-arrested at his house where police said they found burglary loot.

McDonald, police said, was believed to have been the lookout man for the two.

Police found a pair of blue trousers at McDonald's house. They said Sims admitted wearing the trousers when he broke into the Richardson Street address. Blood was found around the crotch, and the trousers have been turned over to Dr. Herman Jones, Fulton County toxicologist, for analysis.

Dr. Jones also is examining a large knife found on Sims to see if shreds of metal screen match those in homes which have been burglarized.

Capt. Ben W. Seabrook, of the Identification Bureau; Det. Lt. M. M. Coppenger, and Det. Sgt. L. T. Bullard reported obtaining the confession from Sims.

Seabrook said Sims admitted stealing the blue trousers from the home of Charles Alexander, 757 Capitol Ave., S. E., where he also admitted stealing some money. The name Alexander is stencilled in the waist band.

Seabrook reported Sims also confessed to the following crimes:

Burglary of the residence of E. P. Stephens, 650 Ormond St., S. E.; burglary of a house at Love Street and Capitol Avenue, and burglary of a jewelry store at 170 Whitehall St., S. W.

He is being quizzed concerning the attempted assault of an elderly woman in her Atlanta Avenue, S. E., home July 14 and the unsuccessful attack on a young married woman at 683 Capitol Ave., S. W., July 24, police say.

Sims and McDonald have been charged with suspicion of burglary pending the outcome of the investigations.

Order Is Restored In Costa Rica Capital

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, July 29—(AP)—Order was restored in this strike-bound capital Tuesday after a day of rioting during which mobs milled through the streets and looted closed shops while unarmed police tried vainly to disperse them.

'No Takers' for 2,000 Homes In City's Metropolitan Area

Buyers Balk at Price, 'Shoddy' Construction

By WELLINGTON WRIGHT

While hundreds of Atlanta families are ceaselessly seeking places to live, a check by The Atlanta Constitution reveals that at least 2,000 new dwelling units in the city's metropolitan area have no occupants.

These dwellings are not for rent. They are "for sale" only, but are finding few prospective buyers. The home seeker is balking at meeting excessively high prices.

In confirming the existence of such a condition here, real estate men attribute it either to one or all of the following three factors:

1. Inflated price for inferior quality.

2. Locations which lack facilitis, such as schools, churches and transportation.

3. Shoddy contruction which makes loans difficult, if not impossible.

Atlanta real estate men say that these houses are mostly the work of builders who had sought to take advantage of wartime shortages by throwing up "jerry-built" houses. Many of them, they say, are "GI houses" which have failed to meet the qualifications of Federal agencies for "GI loans."

These houses are widely scattered over the metropolitan area, mostly on the outskirts of the city, or in some of the suburbs, real estate experts say. Some of them, they say, are in the area between East Point and East Lake, others in the Lawrenceville Road area of DeKalb County, and still others in the vicinity formerly used as Camp Gordon.

"The builders of these houses just took a chance that the wartime demand for housing would hold up as it did during the war," a real estate man said Tuesday. "But during the past few months a stiff buyers' resistance has developed to this type of housing. Thus, the builders are stuck with them, and they seem to have little chance of selling them at the prices they are now demanding."

The Federal Housing Administration has refused to guarantee loans on this type of housing. None of these 2,000 unoccupied and unsold units meets the construction requirements of FHA, the Agency says.

To illustrate their point in reference to excessive prices, real estate men say the prices demanded for some of these houses, conservatively valued at $7,000, go as high as $11,000. For other houses, which have a value of around $5,000, the builders are demanding $9,000 or $9,500, they assert.

"Even under present housing conditions here," said one real estate expert, "people just won't pay those prices for houses of shoddy construction."

In other sections of the city, it appears that contractors have failed to sell houses built of materials taken from Army encampments. In one such case, it is said, the builders demand $6,000 for such houses, but have not had a single buyer.

A large number of these 2,000 dwelling units, real estate men say, are a drugs on the market not only because of shoddy construction, but also because of their size, two bedrooms and a bath.

Sufficient Teachers For Schools

By M. L. ST. JOHN

Admitting that in the past some schools have been "over-staffed," Dr. J. I. Allman, Assistant State School Superintendent, said Tuesday that "in the main" Georgia's schools will be adequately staffed with teachers during the coming year.

This prediction contrasted with statements in recent previous years that many schools might fail to open their doors because of severe shortages of teachers.

Schools generally will have sufficient teachers despite the fact that 386 teachers have been trimmed from last year's allotments, Allman said.

"This reduction will, in most cases, bring greater efficiency," Allman insisted. "We will have to admit that in the past some of our schools have been over-staffed. We can no longer close our eyes to this situation."

Allman said the State Department of Education has allotted a total of 20,309 teachers for next year as compared with 20,695.

State salaries of the 20,309 teachers are expected to approximate $25,385,000. The administrative fund will run $2,395,721, which is approximately two and one-half times larger than last year, and the equalization fund has been set at $5,087,618, making a total estimated "regular" budget of $32,868,339 for 1947-48. This allows only $31,661 for error in estimates, since the total approved budget for this phase of the State education program is $32,900,000.

Congressional approval of the Landis Bill, providing for a continuance of Federal funds to schools left crowded by war immigrations, helped to cushion the blow of reducing teachers, Allman said. Approximately 252 more teachers than are normally alloted by the State are employed in these areas.

The budget provides for an anticipated upward swing in teacher qualifications, placing teachers in higher salary brackets.

Fair and Plenty Hot, Weather Outlook Today

"Fair and hot" is the forecast of the Weather Bureau for the Atlanta area today and Thursday.

The forecast indicates a high temperature today of 93 degrees, with a low of 70 degrees tonight and a high of 94 on Thursday.

On Tuesday, the thermometer made a high of 91 and a low of 66.

Refoule Twice Given Pistol, Told: Kill Self; Kill Slayer, Court Hears

By MARJORY SMITH.

Twice after the body of his socialite wife was found in Peachtree Creek, Paul Refoule, according to testimony offered Tuesday in U. S. District Court, was handed a pistol and once told to kill himself and another time to kill the slayer of his wife.

Refoule's lawyer said police told Refoule to kill himself.

Fulton Police Chief Neal Ellis quoted the slain woman's brother, William Ott Alston, Jr., as telling the Chief that an uncle, Douglas Wright, had given Refoule a pistol with the advice:

"Paul, take this gun and kill the man who killed Pegg, you — - - - ——"

This testimony was offered in the first day's hearing on request by Refoule for Federal Court injunction to prevent Fulton police from further "illegal questioning" of him in the investigation of his wife's death. The swarthy French artist also seeks $50,000 from Ellis and other Fulton police for alleged violation of his civil rights.

The Ellis affidavit said Coroner Ed L. Almand was present and heard the statement by Alston.

Ellis' affidavit, in the next sentence, read:

"Mr. William Ott Alston, Jr., also stated at one time to deponent (Chief Ellis) that they (the Alston family) had not decided what to do with Paul Refoule, so far as society was concerned, that he thought it would be best to get a confession from him and plead insanity and send him back to France."

This was the first evidence offered in the two-month-old mystery slaying which indicated any "break" between Refoule and his wife's family. Throughout the police investigations, the slain woman's family had been pictured as convinced Paul Refoule was innocent of any connection with the death of his pretty wife.

Earlier in the hearing, Hal Lindsay, attorney for Refoule, charged that during their investigation po-

10 Killed, 30 Injured In Beauty Shop Blast

HARRISONBURG, Va., July 29—(AP)—At least 10 persons were killed Tuesday when an explosion ripped a beauty shop apart and blew away a portion of an adjoining jewelry store in the central business section of this Shenandoah Valley town.

Bodies of the first six found, and that of another who died of injuries in Rockingham Memorial Hospital, were removed to the Higgs and Lindsay Funeral Homes where they were identified as women residents of the surrounding area.

Thirty persons were admitted to the hospital here for injuries and 25 remained for treatment.

As firemen and police joined with other workers—many of them war veterans—in cutting their way through concrete and steel debris, other bodies were pulled from the wreckage and an emergency morgue was set up at the blast scene.

The known dead are:

Traditional Boast Finally Is Fulfilled

WAYNESBURG, Pa., July 29—(AP)—A slight but properly attested sprinkle of rain on South Morgan Street Tuesday night was accepted as fulfillment of Waynesburg's traditional boast—"it always rains here on July 29."

Weather records now kept by Attorney John Daily, fourth in a line of Waynesburg weather-makers, show it has been dry in Waynesburg only four July 29's in 72 years.

ZACK MOSLEY TO CALL THE THRILLING TURNS

The Man Who Pilots 'Smilin' Jack' Will Preside at Marietta Airodeo

Zack Mosley, creator of "Smilin' Jack," which appears on The Constitution comic page, will fly his four-seater Beech Bonanza up from Stuart, Fla., Saturday to be master of ceremonies at the Second National Airodeo Aug. 2-3 at the Marietta Army Air Base.

This was disclosed Tuesday by Tom Daniel, Jr., a member of the Airodeo Committee, who formed a friendship with the cartoonist during the war when both flew anti-submarine missions with the Civil Air Patrol.

Mosley would be able to land at the Army Base at Marietta by virtue of permission from the War and Navy Departments to land at any military or naval field at any time, Daniel said. Mosley is known in aviation circles from Coast to Coast, and the distinctive registration number of his plane—NC 11111—is familiar to thousands.

Mosley's itinerary calls for him to land here Saturday and to act as master of ceremonies of the Sunday Airodeo which will present top Army, Navy and civilian stunt pilots in a two-hour demonstration of the most daring and thrilling stunts America's "hottest" pilots have been able to devise.

He will participate in the Saturday show from the start if he can get sufficiently far ahead on his comic strip to leave Stuart in time to make the starting gun at 2 p. m. Mrs. Mosley will accompany him and they will stay at the Biltmore Hotel.

ZACK MOSLEY
"Smilin' Jack" Creator Due Here.

In the meantime, additional civilian air aces were arriving at the Municipal Airport and getting their planes in shape for the gruelling weekend ahead. Now here are Miss Kaddy Landry, national champion women's stunt pilot; Jess Bristow, ace skywriter and precision flier who possesses the only civilian-owned jet plane, and Miss Jean Broadhead, who will present a comedy aerial act.

The Airodeo is sponsored, for charity, by the American Legion Post No. 1, the Civil Air Patrol and the Fifty-Fourth Fighter Wing of the Air National Guard.

It's Tough Paying for a Farm

By RALPH McGILL

ELBERT COUNTY—A farmer has a tough job paying for one farm. I went around to see a man who has paid for three.

He is Frank Anderson, on the Centerville-Coldwater Church Road.

A less stubborn and courageous man would have broken against the many adversities that came his way.

He was sold out in 1933 when the depression brought farm prices down to nothing, and what a man grew very often couldn't be sold.

A lot of back-breaking work had paid for that farm. It was lost.

He was sold out again in 1939. This time he had made a mistake.

"A lot depends on the place you pick," he said. "If the land isn't possible of improvement, if it is cut up bad or hasn't got a terrain that will permit good farming practices, no amount of good farming will pull a man out. In this day and time you've got to pick a place where you can use some machinery."

The Farm Security Association, generally called the Farm Tenant Purchase Plan, allowed him to buy his third farm. He had quite an argument with them. The regulations required the farmer to start with a home that wasn't dilapidated. Farm wives have it tough enough without living in drab, unpainted, falling-to-pieces houses.

I've known farm wives to cry when they got a painted house. A lot of cynics don't think that is important. But it is.

Anyhow, Frank Anderson was right when he argued that the house didn't require all they said, and in the end he won. He made them cut the $2,200 for improvements down to $1,800, and then he went to work for the contractor who got the job and earned about $200 of it back in wages.

He owed, finally, $4,180 for his land and his house improvements.

He paid it out in late 1946, and was always ahead on payments.

This year he harvested 850 bushels of grain, 300 of them wheat for his flour and some to sell. He also has corn and cotton, plus pigs, cows and chickens.

Like almost everyone else in Georgia, he is growing grain. This explains why Georgia's wheat crop in 1947 was the largest since 1882. Few persons ever think about wheat in Georgia, but the State this year harvested 3,192,000 bushels. For the nation the wheat crop is estimated at 1,435,551,000 bushels, the largest in our history.

Frank Anderson has 20 head of beef cattle,

Politics Jail 2,978 Italians

ROME, July 29—(AP)—Italy still has 2,978 of her citizens in jail on charges of Fascist misbehavior and has barred 200,000 others from voting, according to figures released by Giuseppe Grassi, Italian Justice Minister.

Grassi's announcement followed an article in the Christian Democrat newspaper, Il Popolo, which declared that Fascist clean-up laws had created "an absurd and dangerous change of public opinion."

ENTER THE DEFENDANTS—Chief Neal Ellis, of the Fulton County police; Assistant Chief E. G. Fitzgerald and Detective H. B. Carroll, three of the defendants in Refoule's suit, are shown here entering U. S. Court.

REFOULE

lice had given Refoule a pistol and suggested that he "blow his brains out."

In denying this charge by the lawyer, Fulton County attorneys introduced Chief Ellis' affidavit bringing out the alleged remarks of the slain woman's uncle.

In a surprise move during the afternoon, Refoule himself took the witness stand briefly to charge police beat him in an effort to make him confess to the murder of his wife.

Dramatically he raised from his chair to point out Fulton County Det. Capt. Paul F. Bradford and Det. C. L. Hughes as the persons who struck him during questioning at the Refoules' Howell Mill Road home.

The sensational slaying, which occurred May 14, remains unsolved. Refoule, originally questioned during police investigation of the slaying, is currently free under $10,000 bond pending trial on a sodomy indictment.

Refoule, neatly dressed in a gray chalk-striped suit, was called to the stand by his attorney after Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood had heard two motions to dismiss Refoule's $50,000 damage suit against Fulton County Police Chief Neal Ellis and four of his assistants.

Judge Underwood reserved a ruling on the motions, filed by Defense Attorneys Ralph Pharr and Durwood Pye, pending introduction of further evidence.

The French-born artist was permitted an interpreter, Harry Strozier, Emory University French professor. Strozier, sworn in at the same time as Refoule, was not called upon to aid Refoule during brief questioning by Lindsay, however.

Tuesday's hearing, which will be continued today, consisted principally of the introduction of affidavits by both sides.

Ellis' notarized statement denied in detail charges by Refoule that police had interfered with his civil rights and had obtained statements from him under duress.

The artist is seeking an injunction to prevent further "illegal detention or questioning by police; to prevent police from threatening, intimidating or molesting him or any other person with the intention of causing that person to make a false statement or give false testimony; to prevent statements made by him or other witnesses under threats or fear of violence from being introduced into any Court."

He also asks damages totaling $50,000 for alleged personal damages suffered at the hands of police during past questioning.

Ellis' statement declared that "at no time when he (Ellis) was present, were any threats made. . . . Refoule was not hit, struck, or abused in any way."

The Chief of Police denied calling Refoule "foul, filthy, or obscene names," accusing the French artist directly of killing his wife, or telling Mrs. Margaret Wright Alston, mother of the slain woman, that Refoule had confessed to the murder of his wife.

The Chief further denied William Ott Alston's charge, made in an affidavit filed by Lindsay earlier, that officers questioning Refoule at his Howell Mill Road home had carried blackjacks.

Ellis declared he himself "had not carried a gun or any other weapon for 13 years."

Only other witness called to the stand Tuesday was Charles B. Withers, secretary to Ellis, who stated he had witnessed Refoule's signature on an alleged signed confession of sodomy.

Refoule, under Lindsay's questioning, said he had signed the 12-page statement—later used by police to implicate him on a charge of abnormal sex practices—after he was beaten.

In halting English, voiced so low the crowded courtroom of witnesses had difficulty hearing his statements, the French artist said police "told me they wouldn't let me go until I signed it—so I signed."

Lindsay told the Court police obtained the statement by "unremitting brutality" and demanded that it be impounded.

Later in the hearing, Judge Underwood impounded the statement and another, said to have been a signed statement by a 19-year-old girl artist implicated with Refoule in the sodomy accusation, until further order by the Court.

The latter document was handed to the Court clerk inadvertently by defense lawyers in place of Refoule's lengthy statement. Lindsay seized it, offered it in evidence, and moved it be impounded. Lindsey claims both statements are "void because they were obtained by threats of violence and prosecution of the woman."

Ellis contends the interrogations were bona fide and for the sole purpose of solving the slaying. He insisted there was no violence done or offered to Refoule nor any threats made "in any form whatsoever."

Ellis' affidavit included two letters written to the Chief of Police by Lindsay. One, dated May 27, just after police allegedly refused to allow Lindsay to be present at questioning of Refoule, declared:

"I would be an ingrate to engage in criticism of you or your staff, when you have co-operated with me in every way except when you regarded it as your duty to decline my request. . . . You and the members of your staff have worked hard on this case. I know that you will go right ahead doing so, and I shall co-operate with you in every way possible."

A second letter, dated July 3, refuted the first letter which, Lindsay said, "was written in ignorance of the treatment which already had been accorded by you and your officers to my client, Paul Refoule. . . . You have rendered co-operation with you or your staff impracticable, and I shall not attempt it."

Lindsay told Judge Underwood his client had been beaten and had been kept without sleep and under continuous interrogation for 36 hours.

Lindsay was once rebuked by the Court when he referred to police as "gangsters and goons" in connection with his legal argument.

"Be more discriminate in your language," snapped Judge Underwood. "You are discussing a legal proposition."

Lindsay apologized. Earlier, he had said it was "untenable and bordering on the absurd" for the County to ask dismissal of the case and declared Refoule was entitled to protection under the Constitution of the United States.

Defense Atty. Pharr contended the law itself afforded "ample protection" for Refoule and said if Federal courts presumed to interfere in investigations by State officers, it would restrain them unduly in carrying out of their duties.

He said if the injunction were granted, State officers would not only be subject to prosecution under the law, but would be in peril of contempt of court in conducting their investigations.

Withers testified he had "seen Refoule sleeping" between questioning periods and said the artist "drank coffee with questioning officers."

Refoule sat throughout the hearing with his father and mother, Judge and Mrs. Robert Refoule, of Orleans, France.

The slender art teacher listened intently to proceedings, frequently wetting his lips and swallowing visibly. He laughed audibly when a policeman was quoted as saying Refoule had requested no attorney when he was under interrogation.

At least one man was killed in the blast which shattered windows as far as five blocks away. He was a helper on a coal truck which was delivering fuel to the shop.

The owner of the shop and school, Mrs. Pauline Kline Sullivan, escaped injury when she left the spot a few moments before the blast.

Fire Chief Louis Armentrout said the cause of the explosion had not been determined. First reports indicated that a boiler blew up, however, it was thought later that coal dust had exploded.

Armentrout said the explosion blew off the roof of the beauty shop and wrecked the adjacent Rhodes Jewelry Store.

The blast occurred shortly after 2 p. m.

Two women, apparently in the beauty shop at the time, were killed when they were blown through the roof by the blast, the Fire Chief reported.

An eyewitness said he heard the blast and in a few moments saw the roof of the beauty shop explode into the air.

Windows in nearby stores and the Methodist Church were shattered by the blast which firemen said was not accompanied by fire.

U. S. Earmarks Funds for State

Constitution Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 29—Georgia will receive an estimated $18,959,487 for soil conservation, rural electrification, school lunches and farm tenant purchases over the next year.

Roughly, except for farm tenant purchases, Georgia will receive 10 percent less than for the year ended July 1, Department of Agriculture experts say.

The allocations are: School lunches, $2,523,581; soil conservation, $6,095,700; rural electrification, $9,405,900; farm tenant purchase loans, $934,306.

"THERE HE GOES—THAT'S REFOULE!"—With that and similar cries, crowds of the curious flowed about Paul Rene Refoule and his parents, Judge and Mrs. Robert Refoule, as they attempted to escape in a taxi following the opening of Refoule's suit against county police

Avid Throngs Jam Sedate Halls of Justice

By CELESTINE SIBLEY

The somber, mahogany-paneled walls of Federal Court, where good men like Woodrow Wilson and bad men like "Scarface" Al Capone have been heard and the drama of threatened civil liberties has been played out many times, looked down on the most curious throng of spectators in history Tuesday as the case of Paul Refoule versus the Fulton County police went to trial.

It was a mixed crowd that filled the dim old-fashioned courtroom; it overflowed into the marble corridors, jammed the elevators and finally took up a last-ditch stand on the curbstones outside the Old Post Office.

Bobby-soxers parked their Summer school books under benches and grabbed front row seats. Farmers in overalls directed well-aimed spurts of tobacco juice at the brass cuspidors.

Society women in picture hats and bareheaded, barelegged housewives pointed out the French artist and his parents to each other; chased him when he stepped out into the hall, jostled him in the elevator, and gave his lawyer a tongue-lashing on the way to the men's washroom.

Elderly French-Americans came, too, bearing flowers and words of sympathy for the 36-year-old artist's parents.

As the hearing opened, Judge E. Marvin Underwood ordered the courtroom cleared of all those who could not find seats. Marshall H. O. Camp banished from the building all photographers, the local ones and those representing wire services and magazines.

But that did not remove from small oval windows in the doors to the courtroom the constantly shifting montage of curious faces. Out of sight of the judge, but in full view of Refoule and his parents, Judge and Mrs. Robert Refoule, hundreds of avid faces appeared at the small glass apertures during the 10 a. m.-to-2 p. m. period of the hearing.

White-haired men and women' teen-agers, business men from neighboring offices and even soldiers attached to the Army offices in the building took their turn at the improvised peep-hole, and many of them pointed at Refoule and made faces at him.

The 36-year-old artist, however, seemingly remained impervious to their stares. To avoid the throngs who had started gathering in front of the Post Office as early as 8 a. m., he was spirited into the building by his attorney, Hal Lindsey, over the hanging bridge that connects from the fifth floor with the Army building across Fairley Street. At the close of the hearing, however, he left with his parents, sturdy, soberly-clad citizens of Orleans, France, who had braved the crowds alone when they entered the building.

William Ott Alston, brother of Refoule's wife, the slain Peggy Alston Refoule, sat with the Refoules at the opening of the hearing, but during a 15-minute recess at noon he left the courtroom and did not return.

Meanwhile, the audience back of the Refoules shifted unhappily during the long, tedious arguments on technical legal aspects of the case. They heard out County Atty. Ralph Pharr on his motion to dismiss, listened to the spirited plea of Refoule's attorney, Lindsay, and began to stir a little restlessly about the time Asst. County Atty. Durwood Pye presented the rebuttal arguments.

It was only when Refoule took the stand that an atmosphere of breathless attention filled the room, and the spectators moved forward to the edge of their seats.

Refoule was sworn in, and then Harry Strozier, Professor of French at Emory University, was sworn in as his interpreter.

Deputy Clerk Frederick L. Beers, Jr., administered the oath to Strozier while the crowd waited tensely: "You do solemnly swear that you are versed in the English and French languages and that you shall well and truly interpret between the court, counsel and the witness in the issue joined between Paul Rene Refoule and G. Neal Ellis and others, so Help You God?"

Strozier took up his post within a few feet of Refoule; but the French artist turned to him only once during the questioning, and before the interpreter could translate the question, Lindsay rephrased it and the artist apparently understood.

While Refoule testified he had signed under duress a statement—ostensibly a confession to the crime of sodomy—following an alleged beating at the hands of officers and in an effort to save the reputation of a young woman, his parents exchanged glances and moved forward in their chairs.

The name of a 19-year-old girl involved was not mentioned aloud, but the Court Reporter was allowed to copy it from the statement; and by order of the court, the statement was sealed into an envelope and placed in custody of the clerk.

A sigh of disappointment swept over the room as Judge Underwood announced the young woman's affidavit would be held "by the court until further notice."

During the early part of the hearing Mrs. Refoule sat quietly with her black-gloved hands folded in her lap. She wore a plain black dress with a rolled white silk collar caught at the throat with a jeweled brooch, a black felt sailor hat on her iron gray hair and black low-heeled oxfords. Her husband, clad in a brown-striped suit and carrying a cane, occasionally leaned over and explained to her in French some phase of the proceedings.

As their son's attorney, Lindsay, argued eloquently that "laws were written in printer's ink on paper, but our constitutional liberties were written in the blood of our forefathers," Mrs. Refoule closed her eyes and inclined her head slightly. Later she removed her gloves to reveal two handsome diamond rings, one on each hand.

At the close of the hearing Lindsay was halted in the corridor by two women, one of them brandishing a palm-leaf fan.

"We just want you to know that we have no sympathy for you or your client," one of them said.

"Madam, I guess we have no sympathy for each other," Lindsay countered politely and retired to the men's room.

Chinese Report 100 Pirates Killed

CANTON, China, July 29—(AP) A Chinese naval amphibious force killed about 100 pirates in a clash off the Kwantung coast July 23, the newly established Navy signal station here reported Tuesday.

A message to the signal station said the pirates lost their chief of staff and a unit commander.

The Kueling Islands pirate stronghold, about 85 miles northeast of Hongkong, now is occupied by Chinese troops, but for years was the base for organized sea rovers who exacted tolls from passing junks and often raided coastal villages.

Shipworkers' Strike Parleys Bring Some Hope

NEW YORK, July 29—(AP)—Conciliators continued Tuesday their efforts to break the stale mate prolonging the 34-day-old strike of 73,000 CIO shipworkers but there was no sign of an imminent settlement.

Representatives of the Bethlehem Steel Company, who employ the greater number of the striking members of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, met with union officials and conciliators but neither side issued any statements from the closed meeting.

Federal Conciliator H. Ross Colwell indicated that some concessions had been made at the meeting but added that "from the trend of negotiations I think there will be several more sessions."

Union officials had been reported as expressing the view that a settlement was near as a result of the agreement signed Monday with the Todd Shipyards Corporation.

Reduction in British Armed Forces Hinted

LONDON, July 29—(AP)—Authoritative sources said Tuesday Britain might reduce the size of her armed forces—a step which could have far-reaching effects on her role as a world power—to meet a prospective economic crisis this Winter.

Such an action, the informants continued, ultimately might be coupled with a Cabinet decision to dip into Britain's "rainy day" gold and dollar reserve of $2,560,000,000.

As signs of the nation's economic troubles multiplied, a new wave of selling, attributed by financial writers to fears for the nation's future, hit London stock markets.

Rumors spread again—and were denied authoritatively—that Prime Minister Attlee's Labor Government might either call a general election to seek a new mandate from the people or invite the Conservative Party to join in an emergency coalition Cabinet.

ATTLEE'S REMARK

Attlee, replying to a routine Parliamentary question based on a newspaper report, said in the House of Commons: "I see startling information about myself in the newspapers which is totally inaccurate." He did not elaborate.

The Government disclosed that Field Marshall Viscount Montgomery, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, now in New Zealand, would cut short his Pacific tour because of "the pressure of business in London." It was reported that he would advise the Government on the reduction of Britain's Army, Navy and Air Force, which had 1,297,300 men at the start of the month.

Left wing Labor Party members long have urged the Government to reduce the size of the armed services to save military costs and provide more men for undermanned industries. No indication was given of the possible size of the cuts, if they come, but unofficial sources speculated that they were likely to be extensive.

The diplomatic correspondent of the Conservative Evening Standard wrote that "far-reaching reductions in the services will involve major decisions regarding Britain's world policy and overseas political and military commitments."

Well-informed sources estimate that Britain has about 100,000 men in Palestine, 200,000 to 300,000 in Germany and a sizable number in Austria and Italy. There are about 6,000 in Greece.

The Government previously had made it known that British forces in India, which becomes independent on Aug. 15, would be withdrawn by the end of this year. The number of troops there has not been disclosed.

Montgomery left Britain June 21 and originally planned to return only after visiting Gen. MacArthur in Tokyo beginning Aug. 5—a visit now cancelled.

CRISIS FORESHADOWED

In his absence both the Conservative and pro-Government press gave steadily increasing prominence to Britain's long-brewing economic crisis, compounded of underproduction and fast expenditure of the dollar loan from the United States.

The dollar loan is expected to be exhausted by December, and with United States congressional consideration of Secretary of State Marshall's aid-Europe proposal now delayed until after Jan. 1, Britain has no hope of further dollar aid until many weeks or possibly months after the present loan has been expended, it was said.

The Government, an official said, would not be likely to spend more than a third of its $2,560,000,000 gold and dollar reserve.

"If we did, people would get terrified of sterling, with consequent disastrous results for us," he explained.

VANISHING RESERVE

At the present rate of expenditures from the dollar loan, one-third of the reserve would last about two months. Government sources have said, however, that some decision would be made in October as to whether imports from the United States would be cut.

Britain also could count on a loan of $320,000,000 from the International Bank. Under the Bank's regulations, Britain could withdraw one-fourth of her contributions, and in any currency.

GIRL LOSES $25

Bitter Tea, Then--Blank

When your iced tea tastes bitter, little girl, beware.

That's the advice Joan Miller, 17, of 139 Luckie St., N. W., is handing out these days.

Joan was discovered unconscious Tuesday in the Shelton Hotel, at 304 West Peachtree St., in a room in which two other girls were registered. The maid called the clerk who called the police.

Joan told Sgt. A. W. Lyle and Henry Wilbur that the last thing she remembered was going into a Peachtree cafeteria Monday night with a girl whom she said she knew slightly.

She said the girl fetched her a glass of iced tea, which tasted bitter, Joan told police. She sweetened it, but it still tasted bitter, she said. That's all she remembers, police report, except that she lost $25.

Joan was taken to Grady Hospital for observation, and Grady physicians reported that the girl had not been drinking.

Veteran's Plea Of Manslaughter Gets $150 Fine

Charles Nunnally's good war record and the disappearance of witnesses combined to bring about a light sentence for him when he was arraigned Tuesday in Fulton Superior Court charged with murder in a slaying committed seven years ago. Judge Bond Almand sentenced him to serve 12 months, to be suspended on payment of a fine of $150. This was after the Solicitor's office agreed to allow him to plead guilty to a technical charge of involuntary manslaughter in the commission of a lawful act.

Nunnally said that he stabbed Judson Williams in a fight on May 2, 1940, and fled to New York, enlisting in the Army when the war broke out. When he was finally apprehended and returned to Atlanta, it was found that the witnesses against him had disappeared.

A jury in Judge Almand's court found Henry Thomas Sanford, a Negro, guilty of the murder of Alonzo Willis last May 17. He was given a life sentence. According to the evidence, Sanford fatally shot Willis at his home in an alley in College Park after a quarrel.

Mabel Tuggle, alias Dunn, Negro woman, arraigned for the murder of her common-law husband, Jack Thomas, pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter. She was sentenced to serve two to five years. She admitted stabbing him in the arm during a fight but denied any intention of killing him.

Jack Favors, alias Nightingale, alias Jack Huff, Negro, was given a life sentence following his plea of guilty to the stab murder last month of Dewey Ellis.

Duncan's Place May Be Filled

The Fulton County Commission, at its public works meeting at 2:30 p. m. today, may elect a commissioner to fill the unexpired term of the late Clarence Duncan, but observers say this is doubtful.

More than a score of candidates are actively seeking the post, but many of these are disqualified because they live in incorporated areas of the County. Under the law the place is reserved for a person living in an unincorporated area.

It was understood last night that Commissioners are having some trouble in making a choice, but may do so in time for the meeting this afternoon.

Romanian Solons For Peasant Ban

BUCHAREST, July 29—(AP)—The Romanian Parliament Tuesday approved by a vote of 295 to one the Government's decision to ban the opposition National Peasant Party.

The Parliament acted against the party—which claims to represent 70 percent of the nation and holds 33 of the legislature's 430 seats—after the Communist Interior Minister, Techari Georgescu, read an "indictment" of the party.

The decision implies immediate banning of the party, closing of all its premises and confiscation of all its property.

Fate of Hostage Sergeants Stirs Tension in Holy Land

JERUSALEM, July 29—(AP)—Rumor-ridden Palestine waited tensely Tuesday to see whether Irgun Zvai Leumi would carry out the threatened execution of two British Army sergeants in reprisal for the hangings of three members of the Jewish underground.

As the day passed, both the British military and the Palestine police became more optimistic over chances that the sergeants, Mervyn Paice and Clifford Martin, might still be found alive. They were kidnaped July 12 at Natanya, and have been held as hostages by Irgun.

However, renewed appeals from Jewish groups—including Vaad Leumi, the Jewish National Council—that the two be liberated were taken in some quarters to reflect Jewish fears that the sergeants might meet the same fate at the hands of the underground as the three Irgun members who went to the gallows early Tuesday for participation in an attack on Acre Prison May 4.

One military source said there was a feeling in Army circles that if Irgun intended to execute the two sergeants it would have been done so immediately after the hanging of the three Jews.

"Irgun would have executed the men in a spectacular fashion so as to gain a maximum of publicity," this informant said. "There also is a belief by Army officials that Irgun's execution of the two now would be regarded as cold blooded killings by many of the neutral members of the Jewish community, and especially in America."

However, growing fear was reported from all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv that Irgun would execute the two sergeants in reprisal for the hanging of the three underground members — Meir Nakar, Yacob Weiss and Absalom Habib.

One report widely circulated in Tel Aviv was that the retaliation had been timed by Irgun "to coincide 24 hours to the minute after the terrorists were hanged." Another report was that Irgun was delaying the execution of the sergeants "because of difficulty in finding a Christian chaplain."

Shortly after dark in Tel Aviv, bands of Irgunist youths roamed the city's Rialto asking night clubs, coffee houses and moving picture theaters to close "in mourning for the three Hebrew soldiers murdered by our enemy." Some theaters and about half a dozen coffee houses shut up for the night.

The military, in armored cars and troop carriers, made brief but widespread spot checks in Tel Aviv. The roaming patrols briefly would block up intersections, check the identity cards of passersby, and search houses in the immediate vicinity.

The searches, with the accompanying mounting tension, brought from many Jewish sources an expression of fear that Tel Aviv might be put under curfew or martial law unless the sergeants were freed or found alive.

The military also hunted through 10 miles of the Coastal Plain between Tel Aviv and Haifa without results during the day.

In Jerusalem there were widespread rumors which were branded as false by the Army and police that the sergeants had been found hanged near Gaza, in Southern Palestine. A similar report placing the site near Tel Aviv also was denied.

However, the Army did take extra security precautions, increasing patrols and guards in the area of Zion Square after there were persistent reports that Irgun might attempt to hang the soldiers in the heart of Jerusalem.

$658,000 NEEDED

Fuel Rebate Has State in Hole

The question facing the Georgia Revenue Department is where to find approximately $658,000 to refund gasoline dealers for collecting the State's motor fuel tax.

The last General Assembly authorized a rebate of two percent of the six-cents-a-gallon State tax to retailers "to cover loss by evaporation and expenses in collecting the money." But the General Assembly forgot to say where the refund should come from.

Revenue Commissioner Glenn Phillips has this much to consider:

Farmers are allowed a refund of five cents a gallon on gasoline used in tractors for farm work. This money, by a legislative act of 1946, comes from a fund created to repay taxes collected in error.

Wholesale gasoline dealers already receive a one percent rebate "to cover loss by evaporation and expenses in collecting the money," but they withhold the amount from the tax collections they turn over to the State.

The recently enacted retail refund bill, which became effective July 1, fails to mention either of these methods of paying the rebate.

Phillips is considering asking Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook for an opinion on whether he can pay the money.

DR. LOUIE D. NEWTON SAYS:

London, Scarred, Is Depressed, But Its People Are Not Beaten

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a series of articles by Dr. Louie D. Newton, Pastor of Druid Hills Baptist Church, en route to Copenhagen for the Baptist World Alliance meeting. Other articles will follow from stops along the route. Dr. Newton will cover World Alliance sessions for The Constitution's readers.

Dr. Newton.

LONDON—(Air Mail)—Up from Southampton to London by motor is about the pleasantest way to spend a late afternoon I know, particularly when the skies are clear and the fields are waving with ripening grain and across the hedgerows are fine cattle and sheep and horses and the highway is literally adorned with blooming flowers. Such was our experience on on this Tuesday (July 22) afternoon.

I said in an earlier article that I would await with interest the docking of the Queen Elizabeth at Southampton. Well, it was altogether different from New York. There she moved out under her own power, but at Southampton she gladly yielded to the tugs. It was a magnificent piece of work, at that. She came in alongside the Queen Mary, recently off the ways at Clydebank for a general overhauling, looking very spick and span. She leaves for New York the last of July on her first voyage since this round of rehabilitations from her service during the war. And near by was the new Mauretania.

Southampton is particularly interesting in the fact that it was from that spot that the D-Day drive was launched. The historic old city reflects the beating she took from German bombs and rockets, and yet, withal, one marvels at the beauty of the place—flowers, parks, little homes and all.

Neatly dressed children played on the cleared areas where business concerns once stood, and young men, too young to have been in the war, held the hands of pretty lassies as they strolled along the winding lanes. Life, somehow, will go on, even amid war's desolation.

Perhaps the most interesting sight at Southampton was the eager gaze of the cab drivers as several fine new American cars were rolled off the Queen Elizabeth and British tags were attached for the stay of rich Americans who had brought along their cars for motoring through rural England and the continent. One chap said:

"Look at that Cadillac! She'd fetch a pretty price from one of the old boys in Picadilly." And right behind the Cadillac came a Packard, and then a Chrysler. Their eyes popped wide open. This same cabman told me that he knew of a man in Southampton who had paid 600 pounds recently for a 1939 Olds. They are taking wonderful care of the cars they have over here—most of them early 1930 models.

Petrol is very scarce and very rigidly rationed, which accounted for the fact that we saw less cars on the road from Southampton to London than you would see within one block of Atlanta in the late afternon.

English villages have long intrigued me. I remember that Arnold Bennett once said, while visiting the United States, that the English village was the finest example of British life. I believe he was correct. Canterbury, for example.

But this was to be a piece about London, and unless I get along up the road and across the Thames, my space will be gone before we ever come within sight of the Tower. One point I must register before we get to London—the fact that we did not have to look at Bar-B-Que signs or any other disgusting roadside signs to mar the beauty of our trip.

I thought of Ralph McGill's plea that Georgia do something about this blight upon our highways. Maybe Georgia will some day pass a law making it a lifetime imprisonment to tack up cheap signs along our highways. I hope so.

London's face is still wrinkled from the sorrows that came with the bombs and rockets. Much as I love London, I must admit that it is terribly depressed. I seem to feel it more here than I do in other cities about which I know less than I do of London. I guess that the death of my dear friend, Dr. Rushbrooke, deepens my sense of loss as I strolled about this grand old city. This is the first time I have been here without seeing him. I have just come from the Baptist Court House, 4 Southampton Row. There was his desk—the vacant chair! One of his secretaries came close to whisper, "We loved him, too."

But life goes on in London. I got up early this morning and walked—the Strand, Picadilly, Hyde Park, the Left Bank. Mrs. Newton went with friends to the Museum and other famous places for first comers to London. I just walked and watched and listened. I was chiefly interested in the faces of the people. I was richly rewarded. I tell you, these people are not whipped! They are hard-pressed—yes, but they can take it. This would have to be a book instead of a brief newspaper sketch, if I told you what I saw in this one forenoon in London. Not only what I saw, but what I heard. More important, what I felt.

I dropped into The Telegraph editorial rooms. A girl reporter was bending over her typewriter. The managing editor called her over and introduced me. He tipped me off beforehand—that her young husband was killed at Dunkirk and that she had driven a truck in Normandie—that the reason she bent over the typewriter was the absence of several ribs from a shell that struck her while gripping the wheel of an army truck in combat.

That woman's eyes! She spoke softly as she told me about the American boy she held in her arms as he gasped a message to be sent back to Carolina to his sweetheart. She has the understanding heart, for which Solomon of old prayed when he knew he was to become the King of Israel.

I talked to an old man on the Strand. He told me how he watched his three sons go away to death—how he found himself bereft of every immediate member of his family, and saw his home go up in flames in 1940. Another man, blinded for life by a bomb as he stood on watch during the early period of the attack, lifted his head and said:

"See those trees? I played under those trees as a little boy, and dreamed of the day when my own little boy would play here in Hyde Park and I would sit here and dream of what he would do for England. Now I just sit all day when it is not raining. I can't see the trees any more, but still I can dream of better days when little boys in London will play, unafraid. Those days will come, I doubt not. Browning said they would, and God will keep His promise. America has been good to Britain. We shall not forget.

And even whilst the wounded hero spoke, I looked, through my tears, to see little boys playing under the trees—somebody's little boys. Selah.

I strolled back toward the hotel, past little shops and blasted buildings of ancient grandeur. I watched the people at work, not too well clothed or fed, but working. And many of them whistling or humming a little tune. I looked at the lovely little flower pots and window boxes. I listened to the bells in the towers and the birds in the beautiful parkways. But mostly I was watching the faces of the people.

And now they are hurrying to get on downstairs for a motor to Dover where we get the boat across to Calais and on to Paris by train in the late afternoon—a familiar trail to many who will read this story back at home. I am sorry to be leaving England so soon, but we shall be back here as we return from Copenhagen, via Scotland.

I think I wouldn't consider Paris and Brussels this time, except that Mrs. Newton hasn't been there, and also because I am to keep engagements with Baptist leaders in France and Belgium and Holland.

London, as you will see, has a grip on me. And I hope I shall never be rid of the memory of what England means—of the graves of my forbears—of Hastings—of Magna Charta—of Shakespeare and Milton and Dickens and Johnson and Tennyson and Kipling and Wesley and Whitfield and Spurgeon and all that noble company of men and women, from Albert to Churchill, who have stood up in their day and generation to think and speak and act for freedom in the name of God.

Come on or miss my lunch? Very well, let the lunch be forgot. I have bread today that will last me into tomorrow and tomorrow.

"Lord, God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget."

Jewish Sufferings To Be Pointed Out

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, July 29—(AP)—The Rev. Jacob Gartenhaus, of Atlanta, Ga., said he would ask the congress of the Baptist World Alliance to be "aware of the unprecedented sufferings through which the people of Israel have passed during recent years."

"The sufferings are not yet at an end," he said. "The poisonous propaganda and destructive designs of anti-Semitism are still at work against the Jews in many lands."

The Minister said he would draw Baptist attention to this and ask the Congress to pass a resolution calling on their churchmen throughout the world to "do everything in their power to alleviate the suffering of the Jews."

He said the resolution would "call upon the nations of the world to open their doors for the homeless and oppressed refugees, since there can be no abiding peace while this problem remains unsolved."

Baptists Hear Dane Premier In Opening

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, July 29—(AP)—Danish Premier Knud Kristensen, addressing the opening session of the Seventh Congress of the Baptist World Alliance today, said a mutual confidence among nations which is necessary for world peace had not yet been established.

In a speech of welcome to 5,000 Baptist delegates in Copenhagen's huge KB Hall, Kristensen said the current situation places a burden on Baptists and other Christian communities with special responsibilities toward the world.

"A mutual confidence among nations which is the only real foundation for peaceful world developments has not yet been established," the Danish leader said. "And it therefore is important to tie individuals from different countries together with bands that can hold the strain even if interstate relations should become alarming."

Weak, Watery Blood Blamed for Making Men and Women Look and Feel Older THAN THEIR YEARS
How do you feel at the end of a day? Is that old time pep and drive lacking? Have you checked-up on your blood strength lately? Thousands now regaining glowing good looks and vitality through the release of vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.
Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a general run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.
To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.
Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.
Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

For the Best Years of your Life

White sidewall tires, as illustrated, will be supplied at extra cost as soon as available.

THIS much folks learned during the war—the money that buys a Buick buys a lot of years of dependable service.

This much you can be sure of, looking this postwar beauty over – the dollars you put into this one will buy the best years of your motoring life.

Check style. You don't have to be told these long, clean, sweeping lines are everlasting in their classic beauty.

Check power. This is a husky Buick Fireball straight-eight you have here – quick-triggered and velvety from your first go-signal to the very last stop.

Check the ride. Four big coil springs, one to a wheel, soak up road jars like a blotter soaks ink. And their gentle action needs no care to keep them ever soft and perpetually easy in their action.

Check room. Here's space for six on big broad cushions – here is the stretch of generous wheelbase – here the stability of two tons of steady-going roadweight.

Check the lightness of the wheel. Check the quick bite of brakes. Check the solid, all-together feel of a car taut and true in every move and moment.

Check it all, in short, and see if this one doesn't add up to years of fun, years of joyous going, years that are rich in adventures shared and duties well performed.

You open the door on those years when you tell us now you want to put an order in. We'll take it with or without a car to trade and with our promise that you'll get your car as promptly as the times permit.

Build Off-System Roads, Rural Carriers Demand

Constitution State News Service.

SAVANNAH, July 29—The Georgia Rural eLtter Carriers" Association adopted a strongly worded resolution calling on State officials to spend all secondary highway funds for construction on roads not part of the State system and then adjourned Tuesday.

The request was based on a 1946 resolution passed by the General Assembly saying that two-thirds of all secondary road money for a three-year program should be spent on highways not part of the State system.

Meanwhile, in Atlanta, Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook said he had not decided whether the resolution was valid. The State Highway Department asked for a legal opinion since they maintain Gov. Ellis Arnall nullified the resolution by approving it with qualifications.

Arnall said two-thirds of the money should be spent for off-system roads over a three-year period. Then during the first year he spent all the secondary funds on roads that were part of the State system. If the General Assembly resolution is valid all secondary money for 1947 and 1948 must be spent for off-system roads.

A memorial program was held at the Letter Carriers' Convention, paying tribute to the 24 carriers and members of the auxiliary who died this year. Special tribute was paid to the men who died in World War II.

Other resolutions approved by the carriers opposed diversion of auto, gasoline and tag money from the Highway Department and favored creation of a constitutional highway board with staggered terms of office, optional retirement of carriers after 30 years' service and annuities for widows, investigation of alleged unsanitary and inadequate quarters in small-town postoffices and a $300 yearly increase in carriers' salaries.

The Association elected E. L. Jaillett, of Tallapoosa, as President; Glenn Sumner, of Albany, Vice President, and E. C. Crawford, of Macon, Secretary-Treasurer.

Macon was selected as the next convention city.

Editors To Meet

Members of the Southern Industrial Editors' Association will meet at 7:15 p. m. Thursday at Mammy's Shanty to plan for their first annual Industrial Editors' Institute in Athens this Fall. Dean John E. Drewry, of the University of Georgia, will be present at the meeting to assist with planning for the Institute.

NO SOFT DRINKS

Holcombe's Car Retrieved---OK

A policeman found the stolen automobile belonging to A. J. Holcombe, Asst. Chief of Atlanta Police.

Sgt. Clyde Harris was on his way home Tuesday when he spotted Chief Holcomb's car parked on Lawton Street. The car was in good condition, and a pistol, an umbrella and an empty case of soft drink bottles remained untouched. The only thing missing was a full case of soft drinks.

Holcombe's car was stolen Monday when he left it parked at Broad and Marietta while he went into a bank.

Road Safety Delegates Gather Here

Georgians from every corner of the State will open a two-day highway safety conference today, and seek ways to educate motorists against automobile suicide.

In sessions at Municipal Auditorium, delegates to the State-sponsored safety conference will hear talks on every phase of highway accident prevention, and will perfect a State-wide safety organization containing a membership nucleus in each of Georgia's 159 counties.

The meeting was called by Acting Gov. Thompson who declared, when he urged attendance, that "these highway killings must stop." As delegates assemble, the list of highway fatalities shows a grim total of 367 highway deaths in Georgia thus far this year.

In addition to planning local organizations, officers will be chosen for each of the 10 Congressional Districts. All will be co-ordinated by the State Department of Public Safety.

Maj. Elbert Forester, Deputy Director of the Public Safety Department, said Tuesday attendance in excess of 1,000 was expected. All sessions will be held at Municipal Auditorium.

Bottlers Prepare To Boost Output

Atlanta soft drink bottling companies are preparing to meet "almost immediately" Atlanta's thirst demands, which often went unquenched prior to the decontrol of industrial sugar Monday.

Despite some bottle and case shortages, managers of bottling companies here expressed confidence that retail distributors would be able to obtain "all the soft drinks they want" within a few weeks.

Most Atlanta companies have put more men to the task of bottling and more truck drivers to the job of transporting the increased output of soft drinks, which the end of sugar rationing made possible.

$48,957 Sewer Bid Favored

Award of 15 new sewer line stretches scattered throughout the City to Ferguson Construction at a cost of $48,957 was recommended Tuesday by City Council's Sewer Committee. The matter will go to Council's session Monday.

The company was low bidder among half a dozen who submitted cost figures, but it was $6,410 above the cost estimate of $42,547 prepared by the sewer division of the Public Works Department, Ald. Dowse Donaldson, Committee Chairman, said.

Atlantans Cop Prizes At Model Car Track

Atlanta racers of miniature autos walked away with the prizes at the opening races held recently on the Jacksonville Naval Air Station's new track.

Clifford Drennon and Jack Coppage, both of Atlanta, tied for first place in the prototype race, with a speed of 105.88 miles an hour. Bill Arnold, of Atlanta, placed third, and Cecil Simmons, of Atlanta, placed seventh.

In the race for spur gear streamliners, Jack Coppage again placed first, with a speed of 109.75, and Bill Arnold placed second.

Drop Pannkoke Motion, Lutheran Synod Asks

CHICAGO, Ill., July 29 —(AP)— The Centennial Convention of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other States Tuesday adopted a report saying an Oak Park, Ill., church should rescind its motion as to the "self-ex-communication" of Dr. Otto Pennkoke, writer and lecturer, of Quitman, Ga.

U. S. To Call Once More For Capacity Wheat Crop

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—The Government, faced with high grain and food prices and with continued shortages abroad, has abandoned plans to reduce wheat production goals for next year's crop.

It is expected to announce within a few days a call for another big wheat crop next year. Seeding time for next year's Winter wheat is only a few weeks away.

Aware that much of the wheat land has been under a heavy production strain since early in the war, the Agriculture Department had hoped that the wheat acreage could be reduced to give some of the overworked soil a chance to rest.

There is danger, too, of dry weather hitting the Great Plains wheat area at any time. This could revive destructive dust storms such as those that played havoc there during the mid-thirties.

Several weeks ago, before this year's corn crop prospects darkened due to a cool wet Spring, the Department was considering a wheat goal of about 68,000,000 acres. This would have been a reduction of about 9,000,000 acres or about 12 percent from the acreage planted to produce this year's record crop.

Tentative plans now call for a 1948 goal of between 70,000,000 and 72,000,000 acres. The goal for this year's crop was 70,700,000 acres, although farmers—to the nation's good fortune—exceeded it by nearly 7,000,000 acres.

The degree to which the wheat acreage has been expanded under war and postwar demands can be measured by the fact that acreages before the war were running about 50,000,000 acres. To get the present acreage, much range and pasture land in semi-arid areas has been plowed up.

A further measurement of the wheat expansion is furnished by the fact that this year's record crop of 1,435,000,000 bushels is double that of the prewar average.

Under normal conditions, this year's crop would have produced such a surplus that the Department would have been required, under the old AAA crop control laws, to invoke planting and marketing restrictions on the 1948 crop.

The Department could have gone ahead with a reduced wheat goal had corn prospects turned out more favorably. But inasmuch as wheat and corn are interchangable in many food and livestock uses, officials feel that it is essential to have another large wheat crop to assure plentiful grain supplies until farmers have a chance to grow another large corn crop in 1948.

Department goals are not mandatory. They are merely guides for farmers. The latter are free to plant any acreage they desire. As one official put it, there would be little chance of getting farmers to go along with a wheat reduction program as long as they are getting $2 or more a bushel for the grain.

Assignments In ETO Offered Vet Enlistees

Veterans of the Army, Navy, Marines or Coast Guard may now enlist in the Army and receive initial assignments in the European Theater. The European Theater had been closed for initial assignments for more than a year.

Enlistments and re-enlistments for initial assignments to the European command are to fill shortages and are limited to white applicants of the third enlisted grade or below, Capt. John E. Lewis, Recruiting Officer for Atlanta, states.

Enlistment periods may be for three, four or five years. Men with prior service accepted for European duty will be sent directly to Fort Jackson, S. C.

Men whose prior service qualifies them for the Army Air Forces will not be enlisted under this regulation. Also, no original enlistees are being accepted for direct assignment to the European command.

Interested veterans may call Sgt. Cecil Mayes at Main 4014, or visit the Army Recruiting Station at 321 New Post Office Building.

44 ways To get "Something for Nothing"

The railroads have received 44 "rules" demands from the leaders of the operating unions, representing engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen and switchmen. They say they are seeking only changes in working conditions—NOT a wage increase.

More Money For Less Work

But what kind of rules are being asked for? Twenty-eight of them would compel railroads to pay more money for the same, or less work; 7 would require additional and unnecessary men to do the same work; the rest would bring about changes in operating practices at increased cost.

For Instance:

The Union leaders demand additional train and engine crews on Diesel-powered trains—one full crew for every power unit in the locomotive. A freight train hauled by a 4-unit Diesel would have to carry 4 engineers, 4 firemen, 4 conductors, and at least 8 brakemen, or a total of 20 men instead of 5.

"Made Work"—Sheer Waste

The Union leaders demand that full-length freight trains be cut to about half their length, even though such trains are most efficient for low-cost service to you. This rule would call for twice as many locomotives, would double the number of trains, and make accidents more likely.

Additional equipment, yards, and other facilities required to take care of these short trains would cost hundreds of millions. What the Union leaders really want is to make more jobs.

The Union leaders demand that when a crew in one class of service perform incidental service of another class, they will be paid not less than a day's pay for each class, even though all service is performed as a part of the same day's work. The crew would get at least two days' pay for one day's work.

The Union leaders demand that the present basic day for passenger conductors and trainmen be reduced from 150 to 100 miles, which would have the effect of increasing their pay 50%. Such a run often takes only two or three hours!

You Can't Afford This Waste

Demands like these are against the interests of the whole American people, who depend on railroad service for nearly everything they eat, wear and use.

These rules would cost A BILLION DOLLARS annually—a gigantic waste which neither the railroads nor the country can afford.

Railroad workers are good citizens and good employes, with pride in their calling. Their record during the war was outstanding. We do not believe they fully understand the "featherbed" rules which the Union leaders are demanding. We do not believe they understand the harmful results which these rules would have to the railroad industry, to the millions of men and women dependent on railroads for their livelihood, and to the shipping and consuming public.

The great strength of America is in production—an honest day's work for an honest day's pay.

For only through greater production can we hope to stop the steady upward surge of living costs.

Surely, if ever there was a time in our history when we needed to work, not waste, this is it.

Madam, Was Your Daughter There?

The courtroom and corridors adjacent thereto in which a Federal Judge is hearing evidence on a civil rights action against Fulton County Police by Paul Refoule were crowded yesterday.

Most of those present were teen-aged girls, "bobby-soxers," if you please.

They came by the scores, pushing and crowding, straining their ears in hope of hearing some of the lurid testimony which street-gossip has promised will be presented. Now and again they would pause in their gum-chewing to listen, open-mouthed, to what they thought might be the sordid details for which they were waiting. Their books—only a few were beyond school age—were stacked in piles against the walls. It was another sort of education they were seeking.

It was, in all, a sickening spectacle, that of so many, so young, panting after pornography.

One could but wonder, watching their intent faces, hearing their frenzied giggling, what is lacking in the homes from which they came, what is wrong with the civilization of which they are so important a part.

One could but wonder, too, how many of their mothers knew they were there. And what those who did were thinking about to allow it. Have some become so calloused as to abandon all effort to bring up their children in the way that they should go?

Our youth should have sex education, yes. But a courtroom in which charges of sodomy and perversion are being bandied about is no place for them to get it.

Madam, was your daughter there?

Mell R. Wilkinson

Few men have contributed as intelligently and untiringly to Atlanta's growth as Mell R. Wilkinson, who died Sunday night at the age of 82.

For more than half a century, Mr. Wilkinson was identified with every movement and effort to improve the community. His ability was early recognized and his leadership was utilized almost constantly in the years during which Atlanta was expanding into the metropolis it has become.

A Past President of the Chamber of Commerce and of various civic and other organizations, Mr. Wilkinson served with such outstanding merit that he earned the title of "Atlanta's Best Citizen." In his passing, the city has lost one of the stalwarts who did the building of its greatness.

Some Encouraging Figures From Washington

The most heartening news of the month was generally overlooked yesterday.

As of July 1, according to the Civil Service Commission, there were 1,902,000 employees on the Federal payroll. This is 78,700 less than the first of the year and 42,000 fewer than March 31.

The Federal payroll has been reduced more than a million from its wartime peak of 2,915,500, reached shortly before V-J Day. And, what's more encouraging, the downward trend is continuing, additional cuts now being made.

The number of Federal employees is still greater than in pre-war years. But at least the total is finally diminishing.

Walker Locates the Tax Dodgers

Walker County offers a good example of what can be accomplished by a Tax Receiver who is willing to forego politics and apply himself intelligently to his job.

During the past three years, reports The Walker County Messenger, Tax Receiver L. O. Ledford annually has increased the county tax digest through locating those who previously have not filed returns. As a consequence, the total number of returns filed has jumped from 6,785 to 9,042 since 1944, with total assessments up accordingly.

"In discovering those citizens who in the past failed to make their tax returns and for the efficiency in which Mr. Ledford has conducted his office, the taxpayers of the county owe a debt of gratitude," declares The Messenger, adding:

"The figures represented in the digest are still far too low for a county like Walker, and we dare say that there are still those who yet are getting out of paying their share of taxes by not making a return of their property. Anyway, progress has been made in seeking out over 2,000 of those who had failed to give in their property, and the county benefits from it, and it is only just and fair that all make a return on their property."

Many Georgia counties are still having hard sledding, for all the prosperity which has come to most State and local governments. And, almost without exception, they would be far better off if they adopted Walker's plan of making sure that the county collected every possible penny that is due it rather than crying to the State for additional aid.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

The Constitution welcomes letters on either side of any subject. They should not exceed 200 words and must be signed, although names will be withheld on request. We regret none can be returned.

George Replies

Editor Constitution: When I read your editorial on July 18 concerning the tax amendment I agreed with your conclusions and accordingly wrote Sen. George.

I have his response which I am enclosing in the thought that it might be of interest to you.

WILLIAM KELLER.

Atlanta.

"Dear Mr. Keller: I have your letter of July 18, enclosing clipping from The Atlanta Constitution. The writer of this editorial, of course, has no knowledge of the tax problem involved in the so-called community property amendment.

"We were considering a tax reduction bill and the reduction made in revenue already amounted to $4,000,000,000 on a full year's basis. To give relief to husband and wife in noncommunity property States would have increased the loss to approximately $5,000,000,000 on an annual basis. We knew, of course, the President would veto such a bill. As a matter of fact, he vetoed the bill which would have occasioned a much less Treasury loss.

"Five or more years ago I undertook to give to husband and wife in noncommunity property States the right to file a joint return. At that time we were moving into war and had to increase revenue. However, I continued my work to bring about this needed change and as Chairman of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation gave instructions more than a year ago to the staff to work out a suitable amendment. The House Committee on Ways and Means, with the assistance of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, has been working on this amendment for some weeks. It is proposed to bring about a general revision bill in January and in this bill I feel quite certain we will be able to handle the community property problem.

"The amendment offered in the Senate was a half-baked affair and did not deal adequately with the whole problem. It had no place in a tax reduction bill, strictly speaking, since it involved an amendment to the technical and administrative provisions of our income revenue laws. These are some of the reasons why I knew it unwise to include the community property provision in the recent tax reduction bill. Those of us who honestly wished to bring about tax reduction were trying to do so. We were not trying to include reforms which would increase the Treasury loss and guarantee the President's veto of the bill.

"I may add it is a bit discouraging to have one of the leading papers of the State indulge in comments such as you enclose in your letter.

"WALTER F. GEORGE,
"U. S. Senator From Georgia."

Scholarship Group

Editor Constitution: Sally Forth's column in Sunday's paper of July 13 was nice indeed, and you gave the Emory University scholarship group quite a boost. We were pleased and appreciated it very much.

It has been a great privilege to be allowed to take advantage of this, and while requiring time and much study, it has offered an opportunity which I have enjoyed freely.

Politico

Editor Constitution: I read with much distaste the article in your paper, dated Monday, July 21, in which our Acting Governor M. E. Thompson, told the members of the press, in advance, about the political disclosures he intended to make at the weekly luncheon-meeting of the Atlanta Civitan Club to be held the next day at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Sure enough, in keeping with this threat, Mrs. Thompson's son did make some startling accusations and which were contained in the political speech he presented to that group.

I do not intend to agree or to disagree with Mr. Thompson's remarks, per se. That is beside the point of my writing this piece. My purpose is to show that the (political) speech was out of order and out of place at such a civic function. The Acting Governor should have remembered from his previous experience as a member of Civitans that politics is a "hands-off" item in this organization, as it is likewise in all other purely civic organizations, (and surely no one could be so mistaken as to believe the subject of his talk was not political). I, myself, have learned as much, being a past secretary-treasurer of Lions' International and a present charter member of Rome Civitan Club.

Who Shakes . . .

Editor Constitution: Your editorial in the Atlanta Constitution, on Who Shakes the Trees, was very thought provoking. You brought us back to see how small we are and how great God is. You brought the question of who it God? Let me answer that, but with no wisdom of my own. Christ says that He is God, therefore, to know Christ is to know God. To know what Christ is like is to know what God is like, and Christ says He wants to save us from our sins.

'...To Live Without Toil---'

"——Voracious office seekers besieging for patronage . . . this wriggle to live without toil, work and labor."

In the Lincoln papers, left with the Library of Congress to be made public in 1947, and now so made, is that comment by the war President, who was besieged by hordes of job seekers.

"More horses than oats," he commented wryly.

There are many excellent persons who go into national government service. They inevitably are subjected to harassment and attack by members of Congress, who have immunity and wish to make headlines and will do so even though they be in error and entirely irresponsible.

Our system conspires to make Federal government work unattractive. Our State Department has seen many able men enter it with a desire to serve at personal loss. William Benton, Assistant Secretary of State, who proved himself one of the best young executives in our country by amassing a fortune in business and advertising, was, and is, subjected to attack by various Senators and Congressmen simply because he is independent of them. He retired from business because of his independent financial position, with the idea of working in government. Certain Congressmen apparently want someone who needs a job and will, because of the need, bow before their bellowings and irascible distempers. Chester Bowles was another example. The attack on David Lilienthal, purely political and dictated by interests hostile to TVA, is another example. There are many such.

Irony There is great irony in this situation, and also great hypocrisy. I have heard sputtering businessmen and sputtering editors denounce the efficiency of government, howl to the moon about the red tape of bureaucracy, and apparently never face the fact that they themselves would not go into government work and would not allow the better men of their businesses to do so, even on leave of absence, without great objection.

Our system, in effect, insists on inefficiency and demands mediocrity, punishing initiative and aggressiveness with the smothering dust of criticism and nagging harassments.

State Governments Nowhere is the evil so great as in State governments. Most Federal workers are protected by civil service.

The States, for the most part, have covered education and welfare departments with civil service. I know of no safe way civil service could be extended to the departments customarily serviced by patronage. There the help problem is deadly and largely hopeless. It consists, to about 90 percent, of persons who get jobs because of a political obligation. They need political jobs because they are not able to fill others efficiently. If civil service would apply to them it would perpetuate gross inefficiency for a generation.

Now, at a time when there are more than 60,000,000 persons in jobs in this country, the various States are plagued by swarms of job seekers too inefficient to get work without political "pull."

Every Governor knows the daily throngs seeking State jobs. In a sense they are piteous, walking illustrations of failure—their own and of our society.

Qualifications Lincoln liked to tell the story of the king who called in the court minister, before a royal hunt, and asked if it would rain. The minister said not. The royal party went hunting and on the way met a farmer riding a jackass. The farmer told them to turn back, it would rain. The king laughed and went on, but it did rain heavily and the hunt was ruined.

The king sent for the farmer. "It's not me, but my jackass," said the farmer. "When he puts his ears forward, it's going to rain; when he puts them back, it will be dry."

The king sent for the jackass, threw out the minister, and gave the jackass the job.

"It was here," Lincoln would say, "the king made a mistake."

"Why?" asked his audience.

"Ever since that time," said Lincoln, "every jackass wants a job."

Lincoln laughed at the reply of a job applicant, asked to submit qualifications. He did so as follows:

1. I want a job.
2. I need a job.
3. A job would suit me, therefore
4. I should like to have a job.

The lure of a State or government job is indeed strong, and our system demands inefficiency.

Introducing the Hills To Flatland Folks

Complaints have been made, in the past, that this column has overdone enthusiasm about the mountain regions of North Georgia, North Carolina and Tennessee. A few readers have declared, with vehemence, they are (vehement) sick of reading about the vistas and the panoramas and the rhododendron, the mountain laurel and so on to be seen 100 miles or more north.

So, demonstrating just how much weight complaints carry here, let's write another column about the mountains.

This time, though, let us try to see them through the eyes of a couple of visitors to whom a 10-foot rise along the highway was, prior to a couple of weeks ago, a mountain; or, at least, a hill.

You see, these guests of ours came from Miami.

Now Miami is, in many respects, a remarkable and an attractive place.

It is, though, flat. Flatter than the palm of your hand. Flatter, even, than a pancake.

Frankly, while I thoroughly enjoyed my month in Miami last March, I realized then that to live in a land where hills are unknown would, in time, prove too monotonous. There is something about the hills that not only provides visual joy, but which invigorates the spirit.

For Twenty Years So, our visitors came up from Miami. It was years since either had been away from their home city. One had not been out of Florida for at least 20 years.

And even when he had traveled in other parts of the country it had been by train or boat. Hence he knew practically nothing of the glory to be found in the mountains.

Where, too, are there grander mountain scenes to be found than in the Blue Ridge and the Great Smokies?

So we took them for a two-day tour of the mountain country.

Drove north first, to Toccoa, for a visit and lunch with the family offshoot there.

Then west to Hollywood, Ga., on the Clayton highway. First stop, Tallulah Gorge . . .

Those dots are intended to convey a hint of the amazement of our guests. Should be a bundle of exclamation points and a galaxy of stars, too.

Never, they said, had they seen anything to compare with this. Not even the Grand Cranyon, which they declared is magnificent but different. They stood on the observation platform, watching the shadows of the clouds drift over the wooded hillsides. They traced the course of the little waterfalls down the rocks. They speculated on the depth and the width. And they marveled at the majesty of nature.

Further North We drove north to Franklin, N. C., where we spent that night in a comfortable motor court.

Next morning, up the highway, north to Dillsboro. Then that picturesque drive beside the chuckling river and through the lifting hills to Cherokee. A stroll through this village of Indian curios and over to Bryson City for an excellent lunch.

Back to Franklin, then up into the mountains, ever climbing, to Highland, N. C. Across Pine Mountain and down to Wallhalla, S. C., and hence home, via Toccoa, Cornelia, Gainesville, etc.

Each turn of the road, said our guests throughout that trip, opened a new scene of mountain loveliness surpassing all that had gone before. They stood on a high point near Bryson City and traced the curving channel of the river so far below.

They tensed as we neared the Bridal Veil Falls, near Highlands, and laughed in surprise as the car followed the road that goes under those falls.

They were surfeited with beauty and went home to Miami vowing never again to let so long a time pass without a sight of the mountains. They learned the true meaning, at last, for that Biblical verse:

"I will lift up mine eyes into the hills, from whence cometh my help."

Art for Dollars' Sake

This piece is for would-be theater operators.

I think I know where there are some pretty pennies lying around, waiting to be picked up.

They are in the movie business. And you don't have to be Mr. Rockefeller's favorite nephew to go into this business. The ex-GI who is looking for an angle, and has access to a loan, might well give this notion some think-time.

HERE IT IS: Pick out a live burg with a population of 50,000 or better, and open a small movie theater which will play the arty films that are too grown-up for the popular picture palaces.

The ingredients required are a bit of cash, a pinch of showmanship, a cupful of brains, and a liberal sprinkling of good taste. Outside of dancing in doorways for pennies, almost nothing else in the entertainment business can be operated on so modest a weekly budget.

I'm not sure of my statistics, but there must be several million people in this country who can read without moving their lips. These people join book clubs, subscribe to concerts and can count up to 20 without taking their shoes off. There are some of them in every town. It's my hunch they will support a picture house where the fare is above the level of the comic book and the confession magazine.

THE GREAT majority of your customers will be people of average I. Q. and income who are weary of Hollywood's stupor-colossals. And then there are the snobs. America has always bought snobbery if it's packaged prettily. "It's small, but exclusive," the snob tells himself. "I find it attractive, but of course it's not for everybody." His money is good, too.

The conservatively decorated house is part of the package. A lot of people are intrigued by little touches like coffee and lady fingers in the lounge, an exhibit of borrowed oil paintings, and a ticket taker who pronounces his a's high up in the right nostril. OK, let them have them.

Where are you going to get pictures? There are plenty around, begging for a showcase—great pictures that most of America never gets to see — pictures like "Henry V," "The Baker's Wife," "The Well-Digger's Daughter." Most of your product will be British, but there will be some French, Italian, Russian, even Swedish. The big popcorn machine in Hollywood has produced few pictures that a smart audience will rate with "Great Expectations," "Brief Encounter," "This Happy Breed," "Green for Danger," and the soon-to-be-released "Black Narcissus"— all from Blighty

AS FAR AS marquee strength goes, the movie mogul in your town will grind his teeth when your electrics feature names like Laurence Olivier, Vivien Leigh, James Mason, Deborah Kerr, Robert Donat, Maurice Chevalier and Charles Boyer.

Exploitation? Here's where the showmanship comes in. To get a bustle on every bench, you'll have to write literate ads. You'll have to sell yourself to the folks in your town who buy novels at $3 a copy, to the women's clubs, the civic groups, the church organizations, and certainly the faculty and students of any high school or college that happens to be handy. The audience is there, but, as any ward heeler will tell you, it takes a certain amount of work to get the vote out.

The fellow who operates such a movie house may not be pestered by yacht salesmen, but I don't think he'll have to hide from the finance company. Besides making a living, he'll be doing something nice for his town.

Of Diapers And Destiny

"Improper diapering of babies can cause emotional disturbances which may affect an individual's entire life, and so, indirectly, the very cause of civilization," declares the President of the National Institute of Diaper Services.

Have we at last put a finger on the seat of Russian inscrutability: Does Ivan's reluctance to embrace international co-operation stem from a childhood fear of losing his pants?

Is his unwillingness to co-operate with the U. S. and Britain traceable to an unfortunate early experience with three-cornered security?

Is it true, in short, that the hand that pins the diaper is the hand that shapes the veto? And is the cause of peace a lost one now that Joe Stalin isn't subject to change?

If the diagnosis is correct, it is as many have been saying and the Russians are indeed a case for psychiatry rather than statesmanship.

After all, you can't expect a people to put their faith in world co-operation who have never learned to trust the safety pin.

Talmadge Supporters Want Single Primary

Latest talk about the possibility of two primaries in Georgia next year has brought forth objections from two strong supporters of Herman Talmadge, ousted claimant for Governor. Editor J. R. "Country" Ham, of the Abbeville Chronicle, says both factions agree Talmadge can run in the Thompson primary, and therefore there is no need for two primaries.

Marvin Griffin, Bainbridge Post-Searchlight editor who served as Talmadge's adjutant general, voiced his rural section's objections to putting the election on a popular vote basis by throwing the decision into the general election after two primaries are held. Up in North Georgia, Editor Ernest Camp, of the Walton Tribune, expressed the opinion that Talmadge and the people would prefer only one primary. Georgia's Congressmen, seeking re-election, want only one primary, since their supporters are in both the Thompson and Talmadge factions.

Two Factors Whether there will be two primaries seems to hinge on two questions. (1) Will the Thompson faction "readmit a bolter into the Democratic Party" as a candidate? and (2) Will Talmadge agree to run in such a primary if the Thompson group lays down regulations he considers embarrassing?

Ham says he doesn't believe there will be two primaries next year. "If Talmadge can enter 'their' primary as a candidate for Governor and wins the nomination, which he most certainly will do, the opposition will be eliminated by their own process and Herman will have to be declared the nominee under the rules of the Democratic Party, the winner being determined by the usual county unit vote," Ham says.

Griffin's Views Here's what Griffin, who ran a close race for Lieutenant Governor, has to say about the possibility of two primaries: "Being far removed from the political pot which brews continually in Atlanta, we are not cognizant of the reason for the latest concoction of two primaries, but we are against two Democratic primaries because to hold them would only create confusion. Let's keep our differences in one party. Perhaps there are some who would like to see the general election in Georgia the all-important election, but rural Georgia can only lose with any such arrangements. Two primaries to be decided at a general election will destroy the power of those who own and work the land. Two primaries will destroy the hold the rural counties now have."

Representative's Guess Rep. Byron ("Red") Anglin, personal friend of Talmadge and editor of the Stewart-Webster Journal, says the political picture has changed since he made a guess some weeks ago that Herman Talmadge wouldn't run next year. At that time, Anglin believed Herman would wait until 1950 so he could seek a four-year term, and let someone else be the Talmadge candidate next year. Now, Anglin predicts Talmadge will run next year and will ask the Legislature to lift the restrictions—if restrictions exist—to permit him to seek re-election in 1950.

Anglin, by the way, took a slap at Agricultural Commissioner Tom Linder for using the State Market Bulletin "as a personal newspaper." He was disgusted with Linder's fight against pasteurized milk.

Thompson's Record Acting Gov. Thompson, who is expanding State services despite the Legislature's failure to provide funds, is winning favorable comment on the financial condition of the State Government. At the close of the fiscal year, covering parts of the administrations of former Gov. Arnall and Thompson, the State had a surplus of $1,399,365, and, of course, was debt-free. The Ocilla Star remarked that Thompson is doing through economy that which Talmadge told the Legislature would cost an additional $30,000,000. Thompson is proving he is qualified for the job he now holds, the Star concluded. The Adel News observed that Georgia apparently will have plenty of money to pay all expenses this year, although at first it was thought a great deal more would be needed to raise teachers' salaries.

GALLUP POLL

Separate Peace With Japan Is Favored

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J.—Should the United States go ahead without Russia and draw up a separate peace with Japan?

Public opinion in the United States was ready to indorse such a move even before the Russians refused last week to join the proposed 11-nation Japanese peace conference.

Early in July the Institute questioned American voters on the issue as follows:

"Some people say that if Russia and the United States cannot agree on peace terms for Germany and Japan, the United States should go ahead without Russia and make a separate peace with these two countries. Do you approve or disapprove of this idea?"

The vote:

Yes	56%
No	25
No opinion	19

In the case of Germany a separate peace would be difficult if not impossible to draw up, since Germany is divided into occupational zones. But such difficulties are not present in the case of Japan.

The poll results mark what may be the beginning of a new trend of public thinking in this country regarding Russia.

Heretofore most Americans, although irritated by Russian actions, have wanted to keep on trying to get Russia to cooperate. That mood is still present, but apparently to a lesser extent. The majority in favor of a separate peace is substantial.

AS RECENTLY as last May the public was in a mood to keep on exhausting every effort to get Russian co-operation. Three months later, after the Marshall Plan was made public, an Institute survey found a very substantial majority of American voters in favor of going ahead with the Plan even if Russia refused to take part. That poll, conducted in early July, found the following:

"If Russia will not agree to the Marshall Plan do you think the other European nations should go ahead on the plan without Russia?"

The vote among those who had heard or read about the plan was:

Yes, go ahead without Russia	82%
No	7
No opinion	11

In short, there is some evidence to show that American impatience with Russia may have reached the point where a majority want to see the nation embark on a course in foreign affairs more independent of Russia than heretofore.

THE SEPARATE peace idea has wide backing from the rank and file of voters in both major political parties. Democrats favor it 2 to 1, Republicans 3 to 1, as the following table indicates.

	Yes	No	No Opinion
Democrats	54%	27%	19%
Republicans	61	21	18

The reaction according to amount of education is as follows:

	Yes	No	No Opinion
College	53%	35%	12%
High School	55	30	15
Grade or no school	58	19	23

HAROLD MARTIN

Mr. Hennessy And the Cockroach

GUAM—I am much upset with Mr. Spike Hennessy of the Associated Press. Mr. Hennessy, who is here from the Tokyo Bureau of the AP to cover the war crimes trials, came in a few minutes ago obviously distraught. He had just had, he said, a battle with a most monstrous cockroach which swaggered into his room, reared back on his hind legs defiantly, and then proceeded to Mr. Hennessy's brief case, where he stalked inside and was busily engaged in eating all the mucilage off of Mr. Hennessy's envelopes when Hennessy set upon him with a shoe. Whereupon, the cockroach fled through a crack in the baseboard, where Mr. Hennessy could hear him under the woodwork, growling fiercely.

I am glad that the cockroach made his escape, for he is my cockroach. His name is Claude, and he adopted me in British Samoa, crawling into my gear while I was visiting Robert Louis Stevenson's old home there. In fact, I think he was there at the time of Stevenson's death, and no doubt was present when some of his most deathless prose was written. He has been with me since, over a distance of some 18,000 miles by air, and every time they come in to spray the plane for insects I can hear him complaining bitterly, down in my luggage, insisting that he cannot breathe.

Speedster He is a very fine cockroach, and I am glad to note that while he is here he is moving about a bit, improving the breed of Guamanian cockroaches, which on the whole are an anemic lot which lack both boldness, fleetness of foot and a debonair manner, all of which Claude possesses in full degree. I think he must have been a racing cockroach in his time, for I have never seen a member of his family which could get about with such speed. Sometimes I try to fool him, moving quietly about, packing my bag, while he watches me out of the corner of his eye. But as soon as he sees me start to lower the lid of my trunk, he scoots across the room swifter than light and pops inside before I can get the top down and latched.

So by now he is an old companion and I would be very lonesome without him, and I hope Mr. Hennessy will be very careful in the future before he goes around pounding other people's cockroaches with his shoe.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

The Citizen and Atomic Energy

Will atomic energy catapult us into another war, or will it be the basis for a more abundant and peaceful life for all? Intelligent citizen action is going to have a lot to do with the answer.

The average citizen wonders how he can make intelligent decisions about a matter so highly technical as atomic energy. And even if he masters the elementary scientific and political facts, how can his voice count for anything in the halls of Congress and of the United Nations, where historic atomic policies may be shaped?

TWO FUNDAMENTAL issues are to be decided. The first is whether the vast atomic energy resources in this country are going to remain in Government hands and be developed for public service, or be exploited by monopolistic interests for private profit.

The second is whether there will be orderly international control of atomic energy, or a desperate atomic arms race among the nations.

These questions are essentially political, and so we do not need to be nuclear physicists before we can think them through intelligently. The atomic scientists have done a magnificent and often self-sacrificing job of bringing these problems squarely before the public, but they point out that they are no better qualified to speak on them than any other informed layman.

We do need facts and understanding, however, if we are to help our national leaders make wise decisions about atomic energy. We must absorb the truth about atomic bomb destructiveness, which should make another world war unthinkable. We must become familiar with the American proposals for international control of atomic energy, and those of other nations as well. We should learn about the work of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, headed by David E. Lilienthal.

THE LEAGUE of Women Voters plans to carry on intensive educational work on these questions, especially through its many neighborhood discussion groups all over the U. S. The Atlanta Chapter of the National Committee on Atomic Information will make literature, films and speakers available locally.

Does individual opinion and action on atomic energy really count? Public opinion had a tremendous effect in shaping the Atomic Energy Act of 1946. Tens of thousands of letters from plain, ordinary citizens had a lot to do with forcing Congress to abandon its earlier plans for tight, militaristic control of atomic energy in peacetime, and to pass legislation making atomic energy resources and plants public owned, under civilian control, instead.

The fight over atomic energy control is only beginning. It will go on in Congress. There will be pressure on the Atomic Energy Commission to administer the Act in such a way as to give in to the points of view of those who are opposed to civilian control, to Government ownership, to compulsory licensing of patents. The economic, medical and scientific advances resulting from atomic energy can be used to benefit all of us, if we can go ahead to develop atomic energy in the public interest—as the present Act makes possible. Only the citizens of this country can make sure that that will happen.

BOB CONSIDINE

At Last It's a Team

WASHINGTON — The circumstances under which President Truman signed the Armed Forces Unification Act were paralleled for dramatic quality only by the final passage of the Act itself.

All hope that the President might be able to reach his dying mother's bedside in time were dashed when there was 90-minute delay at the Washington Airport in the delivery of the Unification documents from the Capitol. Any delay in the merger might have been equally tragic.

The merger of what are inherently the greatest war-making forces in the history of man has been a torrid issue in Washington for generations.

IN THE LINCOLN letters which finally were dug out of the vaults of the Library of Congress Saturday there is a reference to a word battle between the Army and Navy over possession of some curve-shooting cannon.

Like so many Presidents before and after him, Lincoln washed his hands of the matter by sending the dossier on to his Secretaries of War and Navy, with the note, "Submitted to Mars and Neptune."

Each war in which American forces have been used spotlighted the appalling duplication of activities, the fierce personal rivalry between land and seagoing brass, the fishwife grabs for congressional appropriations. Once it was even suggested that the Army-Navy football game be outlawed as a first step toward exterminating the lifelong animosities of career officers.

The Unification Act doesn't remove all the sins of bygone duplication, nor does it suit all of the interested parties.

The Act does much, however, to wipe out the incredibly costly or demented competition between land and sea forces. It rights the colossal blunder of their placing separate ordnance orders, devising almost similar planes without consultation with each other, building individual hospitals and airfields, and other installations virtually back to back, competing against each other for clothing and other equipment.

THE ARMY Air Force emerges the happiest party in the melting of our might. Truman's signature on the bill meant that the Force's 30-year battle for a local habitation and a name had been won. As one airman put it today, "at least we've got aeronautical thinking right to the top of our table of organization."

The Air Force can now look back with a facsimilie of humor on such incidents as these: The first plane owned by the Army was bought from the Wrights only because the individual who had ordered it didn't claim it.

When the B-17 Flying Fortress finally was developed, the Navy for some time refused to let the Air Force use the Norden bombsight which it owned, and without which the B-17 was useless. Reluctantly, the Navy finally sold 13 of the sights to the Air Force, but at a tidy profit.

AS LATE as the early 1930's the Air Force also was prohibited, thanks to a strong Navy lobby on Capitol Hill, from flying more than 100 miles off the coast of the U. S. on operational flights.

Bristling old Navy salts who fought so long against the merger, knowing that they could always get the ear of navy-minded FDR, are less than completely happy over the deal.

Competent as he is, James V. Forrestal, first of America's Secretaries of Defense, was appointed as a salve to wounded Navy feelings. However, all branches of the huge new fighting unit respect Forrestal, a vigorous New Yorker who looks and sometimes talks like the retired pugilist which he is.

Forrestal is the son of a former New York Democrat who was a district leader. He came up the hard way, worked his way through Dartmouth and Princeton, became a rich broker before Roosevelt invited him to come to Washington as Under-Secretary of the Navy.

THE MARINES are a little unhappy, too. They fought vigorously against the merger, told Congress it would mean the end of one of the great arms of our war history. They are assured continued life under the terms of the Act. But top marines fear that in the event of a war the Army will move in and take over amphibious warfare since any future warfare of that type must be on inestimably huger scale than the World War II landing on the small Pacific islands.

The Army is partly disgruntled. Pentagon brass winced at the thought of losing control of the Army Air Force, fought that separation in Congress on the quiet, angrily rebuked Air Force men who "stepped out of line."

Authors of the Act had to make many concessions. They failed to provide a single quartermaster, an over all public relations office, a standard uniform and other original goals. But at least we have, for the first time in our history, a team that can function under one coach, and one that can work together in peace as well as war.

"Former California Attorney General, Robert W. Kenny, urges Democrats to 'draft' Wallace for President."—News item.

"Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party,"
To give that aid to J. McSpade, to Mulligan or McCarty;
There's never been such a list of men whose patriot hearts were pining
To prop their feet or to place their seat where the White House lights are shining.

There's Dewey and Taft and a wholesale raft in a group that isn't graded
Who might consent to be President if the party chiefs persuaded.
So it won't be long 'til we hear the song of "the man to save the nation,"
Of "the country's pride who will turn the tide of the utterest desolation."

It was Henry Clay in the far-off day who said to the delegation,
He'd rather be right in the country's fight than to have the nomination;
But none of our mob who wants the job would be that calm and quiet . . .
If they knew in advance they muff the chance . . . they'd rather be wrong than try it!

Time for Another Inspection

Well, the months roll around and here it is time for another tour of inspection of demonstration of corn, peanuts, pastures and other forage and feed crops. Doesn't the time fly? E. D. Alexander, Extension Service agronomist, is leading the tours as usual and has worked out an intensive as well as interesting schedule of farm visits.

The tour started July 28 (last Monday) at Perry and will continue on through August 15, at which time it will arrive at Athens. The counties include Dooley, Houston, Dougherty, Calhoun, Baker, Decatur, Grady, Mitchell, Colquitt, Berrien, Atkinson, Coffee, Bacon, Pierce, Appling, Tattnall, Bulloch, Henry, Spaulding, Carroll, Chattooga, Floyd, Union, Gordon, Towns, Hall, Walton and Clarke.

THIS TOUR covers many of the key counties in the State, and the farms in those counties have been selected by the county agents with the idea of providing the very best demonstrations possible. Everyone is invited to join the tour, the only requirement being that you make your own reservations. The best way to approach the matter is to contact your county agent. He will know the persons joining the tour from your county and can make transportation and hotel arrangements.

Demonstration is so much more effective than explanation, to the average person, that all of us should use this method where possible. It is one thing to read or to be told that a farmer is making 60 to 100 bushels of corn per acre; it is quite a different thing to see it with one's own eyes. You believe what you see!

There were many people who did not believe that cattle would graze sericea lespedeza, until they saw the demonstration with their own eyes. So with the curing of hay direct from the field by means of mechanical blowers. Or the use of one-man hay balers. Such things have to be seen to be believed.

MOST of us have been of the opinion that we cannot make satisfactory corn yields in Georgia. It is beginning to appear that we might be mistaken in this, for here and there certain farmers are making splendid yields. The thing for all of us to do is to visit these farmers and see for ourselves what the situation is; witness his demonstration.

By all means go along if you can on this tour with Brother Alexander and his associates.

Oil Cartel Fixes Prices, Quotas

WASHINGTON—The United Nations Economic and Social Council has had its attention called to an international oil cartel fixing market quotas, prices, rebates and other preferential arrangements involving American, British and Swedish combines.

The clue to this international monopoly, which has rather sensational implications in these times, is found in a statement submitted to UNESCO by Thorsten Odhe, its consultant for the International Co-operative Alliance.

IT HAS a reference, with brief quotes, to the report of an investigation last year by a Swedish Government Commission into present market conditions for petroleum products. This investigation eventually brought out the whole story of the oil marketing cartel, hitherto shrouded in secrecy. This government's interest is manifest in the current scrutiny by the State Department of this revealing report, which previously has received no publicity in this country.

While the original agreement creating this cartel was in 1928, with revisions in 1930 and 1934, Mr. Odhe said, "To a considerable extent this highly monopolistic organization of the consumer market seems to have been revived after the war." This coincides with the opinion of our government experts. In its report, the Swedish Commission said:

"In the course of meetings with representatives of the importing firms and by submitting an extensive collection of documents to scrutinization, we have been able to state that collaboration between importing firms has taken place in different respects, i. e., regarding the fixation of market quotas, prices, offers to customers, fixing of rebates, relations to co-operative organizations of consumers, exclusive agreements with customers, transfer of customers, etc.

"IN THIS conjunction it should be said that this collaboration in its main parts is based on international agreements, one of which—with the title 'Draft Memorandum of Principles'—has been reprinted in our report; this agreement affects the Standard, Shell and B. P. combines." (The last is Swedish.)

"We have also said in our summarizing commentary that the representatives of the affiliated companies of the combines have laid down erroneous and misleading statements of what has taken place in this respect before the Committee."

The Commission procured a copy of the draft memorandum of principles, or dmop as it is called, from Standard Oil of New Jersey.

IN THE 1934 revision the principals named were Standard of New Jersey, Royal Dutch-Shell, and Anglo-Iranian, the last 54 percent controlled by Britain. The 1934 agreement was on the basis of the 1928 principle. It was unsigned. The dmop was supplemented by what is known as the "Asis" agreement, which provided for assignment of marketing quotas where there was another party, an outsider, either in the market already or seeking a market. Also, for allocations if the other party was purchased by one of those in the original agreement.

Specific penalties were fixed for any over-sale in any market above a 5 percent leeway. The schedules of penalties range as follows: For 1 percent oversale above the 5 percent leeway, 5 percent of the value of excess sales based on the Gulf Coast price; for 2 percent, 10 percent penalty, and so on up to 25 percent penalty for 5 percent oversale above the 5 percent leeway.

Why it took so long to find out about these agreements is understandable from all the secrecy precautions. This explains an experience of our own Government experts during investigation of cartel arrangements involving Standard Oil and the German I. G. Farben. Repeatedly they ran across the symbols "dmop" and "asis" and always Standard Oil representatives said they did not know what they meant.

This cloak-and-dagger business is strange, especially since one peace aim was to break up cartels, make it possible for all nations to get access to raw materials, and thus eliminate a reason for war.

THE "NANCY HANKS II"

GENERAL MOTORS DIESEL LOCOMOTIVE

We feel quite happy because the Central of Georgia has named its new, luxurious Savannah-Atlanta streamliner "NANCY HANKS II". For it is powered by another thoroughbred — the newest and most modern locomotive in the world — a General Motors Diesel passenger locomotive.

This means that travelers on the "NANCY HANKS II" are going to have as smooth and comfortable a ride as railroad travel affords — quick and easy transition from standing still to hitting high speed — and well-nigh 100% on-time performance — all you'd naturally expect from a thoroughbred.

In powering the "NANCY HANKS II" (as well as "MAN O' WAR", the new streamliner between Atlanta and Columbus) with General Motors Diesels, the Central of Georgia joins the growing list of American railroads that now head up a total of more than 150 crack trains with this new and modern power.

Also GM Diesel-powered is the Central's new Atlanta-Columbus streamliner, the "MAN O' WAR"

Sams Is Held Eligible For Vet Council Post

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook ruled Tuesday that Capt. F. A. Sams is eligible to hold the post of Director of the Veterans' Education Council, even though Sams was a member of the General Assembly which created the position.

The Attorney General said a constitutional provision barring a legislator from accepting a newly created civil office—even though he resign from the General Assembly—by appointment from the Governor or the General Assembly does not apply to Sams. The reason: Sams was appointed by a council, and not by either the Governor or the General Assembly.

Cook traced the history of constitutional provisions regarding legislators taking State jobs. The Constitution of 1877 prohibited a solon from taking a State job during his tenure of office, regardless of when the job was created. It banned a legislator from resigning to take an appointment by the Governor or General Assembly to any civil office.

Easing up on this ban, the Constitution of 1945 permitted a legislator to resign and accept appointment from the Governor or General Assembly to a civil office—provided the office was not created by the General Assembly of which he was a member, Cook reported.

Prior to 1935, statutes banned a legislator from being employed by any department, board, bureau or other State agency, Cook continued. This was repealed in 1935.

"I am of the opinion that the 1945 Constitution provision means that no senator or representative shall be appointed by the Governor or the General Assembly to any civil office which has been created during the term for which such senator or representative was elected," Cook concluded. "I am also of the opinion, since the General Assembly in 1935 saw fit to abolish the ineligibility of members of the General Assembly appointed or employed by boards, bureaus, and other State agencies, that Capt. Sams is eligible to be elected by the Veterans' Education Council created under the Act of 1947."

Cook said Sams is eligible for the post even if it is a civil office. But he goes on to express doubts that it is a civil office, since the director is employed by the Board at no fixed salary and for no definite term, and since his powers are subject to review by the Board.

Cook's opinion was rendered at the request of Chairman F. H. Rayfield of the Veterans' Education Council.

Sams was Director of the Veterans' Education Council when it was a division of the State Veterans' Service Board. During the recent legislative session, he sponsored a bill to create the Council as a separate department of State Government. When the General Assembly adjourned, he resigned as a member and was named by the Council as Director.

'DAD-GANG IT,' NOW LET 'EM TALK

Van Asperen, 73, To Wed His 'Platonic' Mate, 94

DETROIT, July 29—(UP)—William H. Van Asperen and Ellen Davis think it will serve their "dad-ganged" neighbors right if they don't have anything to gossip about after Saturday.

Saturday, the 73-year-old Van Asperen and the 94-year-old Mrs. Davis announced Tuesday, will be the date of their wedding after 17 years of "platonically living together."

Two weeks ago, Van Asperen said, he got "sick and tired" of the tongue wagging and popped the question to Mrs. Davis.

He has been married three times before and his bride-to-be four times. All their previous mates are dead.

They met at a square dance 18 years ago at Albion, Mich., and fell in love at first sight, Van Asperen said. A year later they began living together.

"These dad-ganged people have always been talking about us," he said. "It'll serve 'em right if they haven't anything to gossip about when this is over."

LeCraw Accepts Church Position

Roy LeCraw, former Mayor of Atlanta, has been named director of the Presbyterian Program of Progress in the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church. He will serve the church as a dollar-a-year man, and has requested the appointing committee to accept his services without remuneration. He turned down a $10,000-a-year salary.

The Presbyterian Program of Progress proposes a general expansion of all work of the Southern Presbyterian Church. Dr. J. R. McCain, President of Agnes Scott College, is Chairman of the Assembly's Committee on Stewardship, under whose supervision the Program of Progress is promoted.

JENKINS MODELS CAP

White Caps 'Out' For Police Force

The white cap, worn for years by superior officers and traffic officers on the Atlanta police force, was officially discarded Tuesday.

The Uniform Committee of the Atlanta Police Department adopted a new, smaller, closer-fitting cap for policemen, and ruled that everyone's cap will be Navy blue from the Chief down to the lowliest flatfoot.

The Uniform Committee also voted to adopt the Eisenhower jacket, but was dissuaded by Chief Herbert Jenkins, an ex-officio member of the Committee, who warned that most men had just purchased new uniforms. "Give the men a year's notice," he advised. "Then let them decide if they want the Eisenhower jacket."

Wild Dog Of Bikini Is Captured

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—The Navy finally has captured the wild dog of Bikini.

The animal has been roaming the island since the atomic bomb explosion last Summer.

After its capture in a hambone baited trap, the dog appeared to be in good condition on its diet of crabs, clams, and other food picked up on the island.

She will come back to the United States aboard the Navy's scientific resurvey laboratory ship, the USS Chilton, to take her place with Pig 311 and a goat, two other survivors of the Bikini A-bomb blast, the Navy said today.

A Navy party is conducting a six-week survey of the lingering radio activity on Bikini and in the ships that lie under the lagoon.

College Park Gets New Firm

Dr. J. K. Plummer, research director of the Tennessee Corporation, one of the South's leading chemical and fertilizer concerns, announced Tuesday that his firm would open a chemical research laboratory in College Park Aug. 15. He said the laboratory would be larger than any now operating in Atlanta.

Dr. Plummer said the laboratory would be housed in the Mansion Hotel, now being remodeled. Twenty chemists will be employed researching new products from the Tennessee Corporation's present raw materials, chiefly copper, iron and sulphuric acid.

The firm owns or controls nine plants, one of which is in East Point and another in Cedartown.

M'GILL TOUR

two mules and a tractor. He also has four fine children to help him.

"I have raised everything I could," he says.

He is a member of the Coldwater Methodist Church. His father, Walton S. Anderson, lives across the road from him. He is 77 years old, and almost has had to give up his favorite sport of fox hunting. Can't go more than two or three mornings a week now. He also planted and plowed two acres of corn, just to keep his hand in.

Frank Anderson's farm appeared to be in fine shape. This time he has one where he can make it, and the third time he believes, is the charm.

If Georgia had more like him—men who refuse to quit in the face of failure and trouble—you can see what it would mean to the State.

We dropped in to see the Parker Adams farm. I never ate finer peaches than we got from a tree on his place. He had forgot the name of the variety, but they were so sweet the bees were swarming around to get at those which had fallen to the ground and broken open. Also, some cider pressed out of apples the day before and right out of an REA refrigerator wasn't hard to take.

Parker Adams and his son, Clyde, are running a combination dairy and general farm. It is a good one, and one of which they can be proud. One son is in Atlanta and a daughter, Medora, is with the FSA. A third son was killed with the Army, driving the Japanese out of the Aleutians. You meet so many farm homes where someone didn't come back from that war.

There is no cotton on the farm. "An old man just can't make cotton," he said. He isn't old, and he could make it. But like others, the work and the worry of it ceased to attract. They went to cows.

They are milking 12 cows, and have just really got started in dairying. They were beginning right, building a new, clean, modern milk barn.

The farm is of 100 acres. Fifty-six acres are in cultivation, with 10 acres in woodland and 40 in improved pasture. More improvement is slated, and that's a nice balance.

He had 25 acres in wheat and oats, following each with lespedeza. Maybe that point needs explaining again. When oats or wheat are planted, lespedeza is sowed in the grain field. When the grain is cut in the early Summer, late May and early June, the lespedeza is up high enough for grazing.

There were 10 acres of corn, and this is a good corn year.

In the pasture are three acres of kudzu, and H. Parker Adams is a man who would delight the Kudzu Club of Georgia and America. He would be a fine man for a testimonial meeting.

"I'm just started at dairying," he says, "but I notice when I graze my cows on kudzu they fill up the milk cans. If I put them on my other pasture, they are a little short. Kudzu sure means more milk."

Parker Adams has always farmed, and his father was a farmer before him. Now that he is out of cotton, he feels he is just getting started at living.

"I remember my daddy saying," he recalled with a chuckle, "when he looked at some of the first farm machinery we got, 'that it looked like when a man just gets everything fixed up to live he is about ready to die'."

Sometimes it does look that way. But all over Georgia I am seeing men who are "fixing up" to live well before they are about ready to die. There are failures, of course, but the face of Georgia is changing to grain, dairying and other crops while cotton is holding on, producing more from fewer acres Georgia is improving.

In the next "Report From the Country" I want to tell of a fellow who was running a street car a few years ago, and now is running a big farm of his own, and about some other Elbert County farmers who have done a good job.

THE SENATOR CORRECTS RECORD

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—Now it comes out that Sen. Fulbright, Democrat, Arkansas, doesn't think prosperity is an evil—the Congressional Record just misquoted him.

In Thursday's record, Fulbright was quoted as saying that "we should not count on this continued "evil" of prosperity."

The Senator put the record straight—what he said, he stated, was "level of prosperity."

NO KITTEN---IT'S AN OCELOT

NEW YORK, July 29—(AP)—The kitten that a sailor friend gave John McLaughlin, a machinist of the Bronx, looked a little strange when he got it home.

The Bronx Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals explained why:

The kitten is going to grow up to be an ocelot, a wildcat of the American tropics. Now seven inches high, the kitten will do its growing up in the Bronx Zoo, Society agents said.

Two Runaway Nags Halt Train Traffic

PHILADELPHIA, July 29—(AP) A pair of happy-go lucky dobbins ran away from their South Philadelphia stable Tuesday and for several hours carried on a private feud with the iron horse.

The two horses decided the grass growing between the ties of the Baltimore & Ohio and Reading Railroad tracks on Swanson Street made for pretty good eating.

While freight trains waited two policemen finally succeeded in leading the troublemakers back home.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

(1)—"Highway Obligations"—The amount of State Funds required to complete all contracts outstanding and there is a cash reserve to liquidate this item which is payable as work progresses.

(2)—All "General State Bonds" outstanding are past due, but have not been presented for redemption. Cash reserve of $93,500.00 is held in State Treasury to liquidate this obligation.

(3)—Of the "Highway Refunding Bonds" outstanding $30,000.00 in bonds are past due but have not been presented for redemption, and $2,650,000.00 in bonds to mature March 15, 1948. Cash Sinking Fund is held in the State Treasury to liquidate this obligation in full.

(4)—Of the "W & A Rental Discount" warrants outstanding $17,000.00 in warrants are past due but have not been presented for redemption, the remaining $1,350,000.00 mature $45,000.00 on the first day of month beginning July 1, 1947, and for each month thereafter through December 1, 1949. Cash Sinking Fund is held in the State Treasury to liquidate this obligation in full.

(5)—"Obligations—Regents Authorized." Payable from dormitory rentals, maturing in part on each May 1, 1949 through 1978.

The Regents by exercising the powers of a corporate entity issued the Dormitory Revenue Bonds for the benefit of the Georgia School of Technology. There is no specific act of the General Assembly authorizing the issuance of these bonds, nor was the action subject to the approval of the Governor, Attorney General or the Budget Bureau of Georgia. See Auditor's notes in financial report of Sept. 30, 1946, for opinion of Attorney General as to the legal status of this obligation. Ruling was that this item was not an obligation of the State that it could not be retired from tax or appropriated funds, being an obligation of and payable only from the earnings of the dormitory.

This statement of Georgia's financial condition is published and paid for by the Executive Department as a matter of public information. It shows the balance sheet of our state as prepared by the State Auditor and released as his official report on July 12, 1947. This publication does not include the portion of the report showing detail of receipts and allotments to agencies. A copy of the full report is public information and available in the office of the State Auditor.

M. E. THOMPSON, Acting Governor

FOR 17 YEARS, AMERICA HAS SAID...

"When there's a Choice it's a PHILCO!"

If you're about to buy a radio or radio-phonograph, you're sitting in the driver's seat again.

TODAY, FOR THE FIRST TIME IN SIX YEARS, you don't have to "take what you can get" any more. You can walk into your dealer's store, choose what you really want on the basis of quality, tone, performance and reputation... and buy it for immediate delivery.

THAT'S WHY YOU'LL WANT TO SEE the new 1948 Philco radios and radio-phonographs arriving now at your Philco dealer. Philco, the industry leader, is back in full production. Vast new factories with the longest radio production lines in the world are working at new efficiency, turning out new 1948 Philcos at the greatest rate in their history.

BUT MUCH MORE IMPORTANT, in these days of post-war readjustment, Philco is bringing you the same standard of value which has made its name "famous for quality the world over." With all its resources as the world's largest radio manufacturer, there is no price which Philco could not meet or beat. But there is a standard of quality with which Philco makes no compromise.

WHEREVER RADIOS and radio-phonographs are sold, the Philco name stands for quality and value... the standard of comparison for radio buyers everywhere. In its new models, Philco has kept faith with that reputation. In every 1948 Philco, from $19.95 up, you get the utmost in tone, performance and workmanship for the price you pay... PLUS, the assurance of years of enjoyment and satisfaction which are implied in the Philco name.

THIS YEAR, AGAIN, impartial surveys* show that of all who name the radio-phonograph they will buy, 50% want a Philco. For 17 years, America has said... "When there's a choice, it's a Philco!" So when you make your purchase, let Philco quality be your guide... accept no less and pay no more.

Mrs. Blackshear Aids Fight on Forest Fires

By DORIS LOCKERMAN,
Woman's News Editor

One woman's admiration for another and the collaboration that followed has already challenged the raging forest fires in Georgia, and led to the instruction of Georgia school children in the conservation of the State's great natural resources.

Moreover, it has won for Mrs. Hinton Blackshear, vivacious Atlanta club leader, and green-thumb gardener, evaluation as "potentially the most valuable person in the Conservation Program of Georgia." The appraisal was made recently by W. R. Hines, Assistant Forester for the Southern Region, U. S. Forest Service.

Mrs. Blackshear's service to Georgia's timberlands, its soil, and watersheds, stemmed immediately from her choice to work under Mrs. Oscar Palmour, long-time Atlanta leader and for years Conservation Chairman of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

"I was offered my own chairmanship when I finished my term as President of the Fifth District, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs," Mrs. Blackshear says, "and I choose conservation only because of Mrs. Palmour. She has so much to give all of us."

Unprotected Forests

Mrs. Blackshear is a zealous worker, a determined researchist and a woman of rare initiative. The apprenticeship to Mrs. Palmour sent her to comb State files on conservation needs, where she learned that of Georgia's 159 counties, only 35 have organized fire protection for forests, and forest fires flame in Georgia six months out of every year . . . three months in the Spring and three months in the Fall.

Her job seemed obvious. There was need for laws. . . . The first goal was to mould public opinion. Into the hands of every Woman's Club of Georgia went a booklet on conservation program material, and soon 30,000 club women in Georgia knew about water, soil, minerals, wildlife, as well as forest conservation.

When the recent General Assembly convened for its tumultuous session, there was a bill proposing State-wide protection of forests, increased equipment and personnel, and adequately financed nurseries. The bill passed the Senate, but got lost in the political shuffle in the House. Without an appropriations bill, it would not have functioned anyway.

Behind the Scenes

Mrs. Blackshear and her women were behind the scenes in that. There had been forums, radio programs, many conversations.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Blackshear led 40 Georgia schoolteachers, principals and county superintendents to Brasstown, N. C., to attend the first workshop in conservation for Georgia school people.

They traveled under 40 scholarships underwritten by the Student Aid Foundation of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Blackshear, as Vice President of the fund, had persuaded the Foundation to earmark $1,000 for the workshop.

Now, this year, in Georgia's schools, youngsters will learn that muddy rivers are sinful streams; that wild flowers, azaleas, galax, rhododendron, are valuable; that burning campfires destroy their own hopes for new homes when they are grown and ready for them.

And Mrs. Blackshear is still not through. The Georgia Legislature will hear more of the forestry bill when it meets again.

Keeps Your Ears Warm, Too

You know how flattering and sweet a nun's coif can be . . . well, our more worldly sisters will have their day this Fall. Wimples are back. They are those scarves that come down over the ears, or fall like a fabric windbreaker over the neck. They come in all moods. Everything from veiling with sequins to velvet or rabbit fur. It might be an idea to spruce up an old hat.

MISS ANNIE PERRY NOWELL

Nowell-Heuett Betrothal Told

Mrs. Thomas Gibson Nowell announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Annie Perry Nowell to Capt. David Arthur Heuett, U. S. Army. The marriage will take place August 15, at the Post Chapel, Atlanta Ordnance Depot.

Miss Nowell is the daughter of the former Miss Annie Estelle Perry and the late Thomas Gibson Nowell.

The bride-elect attended Georgia Junior College and Georgia Evening College. She is now employed by the Texas Oil Company.

Capt. Heuett is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Heuett, of Lander, Wyo. He has served or the past five years in the Army, and is now stationed at the Atlanta Ordnance Depot.

THE EAR DOES A VANISHING ACT—To keep pace with new clothes and hat styles, the hairline is undergoing a change. Watch for neatly waved heads that remind you of Ann Harding not so long ago, and look for bobbed coiffures with the ends curled forward over the ears. Look also for bangs—all the old types and a new one called "angle bangs," which bulge softly from the forehead, ends curled under, and form a right angle between the eyes—especially good with the toreador hats. Here, Joseph Battell, of Adolphe's Harper Method Beauty School, has designed what he calls the "dimensional coif," executed by sweeping the hair from a right side part and arranging it in a semi-bun over the left ear. The right side is brushed smoothly back, covering the lower half of the part, the ends incorporated in the bun over the left ear. Black felt profile hat, with dragon-fly green Birds of Paradise plumes, is by Harold.

DAPHNE PRESTON ALSTON CHRISTENED

Daphne Preston Alston, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Alston, Jr., was christened yesterday afternoon at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Rev. Milton Richardson officiating. Mrs. Robert C. Alston and Mrs. Roy Minier were the baby's godmothers, and Jack Glenn stood as godfather.

Dr. Mary Latimer Gambrell, Charles G. Gambrell and Mr. and Mrs. William H. Gambrell, all of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. William Law Watkins and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Stringer, of Anderson, S. C., will spend the weekend with Smythe Gambrell at his home on Peachtree Battle Avenue.

For Bride, Brides-Elect

Mrs. S. W. Newell and her daughter, Mrs. John Newton, of Waynesboro, entertained yesterday afternoon at a tea at Rich's, honoring Mrs. Richard Shultz, the former Miss Sarah Malone, whose marriage took place recently, and two popular brides-elect, Misses Mary Neely Norris and Jane Estes.

Miss Margaret Anderson, Fiance Will Wed on Aug. 27

Miss Margaret Loraine Anderson and George Braungart, III, will marry on Aug. 27 at 8:30 p. m. at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer. Rev. John R. Brokhoff will officiate, C. W. Dieckmann will be organist, Mrs. Allen Harrington, soloist, and Carl J. Bliem, Jr., acolyte.

Edwin Yancey, Jr., George Stradtman, of Calhoun; Theodore M. Margeson, Fred Hubbell, Jr., Raymond Murrah, Richard Yancey, Ervin Jackson, of Birmingham, will serve as groomsmen, and the ushers will include Dr. E. C. Bleim, Leonard M. Anderson, Lawton C. Shaw, Thomas Lively, Dean Garner and Groves Hillard. George Little, of Charlotte, N. C., will be best man, and the maid of honor will be Miss Vivian Newberry.

The bride-elect's father will give her in marriage. Mrs. Edwin F. Yancey, Jr., will serve as matron of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Misses Mary Ann Braungart, Dorothy Archer, Bebe Kelley, Mrs. William Sproesser, Mrs. Clinton Morgan, of Nashville, Tenn., and Mrs. Paul Stone, of Waynesboro.

A reception given by the bride-elect's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Fred Anderson, will follow at the Druid Hills Golf Club, at which Miss Estelle Anderson and Mrs. Lamar Wise will keep the bride's book. Assisting in entertaining will be Mesdames Frank Silvey, Harold Dean, Hugh Gregory, William Coleman, Misses Helen Roberts, Betty Brown, Loraine Vicknair, Madeline Wall and Jane Carey.

Inaugurating the party series for Miss Anderson and Mr. Braungart is the dessert-bridge at which Mrs. Carl Bleim and Mrs. E. C. Bliem will entertain tomorrow at their home on E. Rock Springs Road. The following day, Miss Loraine Vicknair gives a luncheon at the Mirador Room. Misses Mary Ann Tyler and Rosemary Thompson entertain at tea on Saturday. Aug. 5 is the date of Mrs. Edwin Yancey's tea at her home on Sixteenth Street, and on Aug. 9 Mrs. William Coleman gives a tea at Rich's. Mrs. Frank Silvey and Miss Jane Carey will fete Miss Anderson at luncheon at the Paradise Room on Aug. 16, and on Aug. 18 Mrs. Lamar Wise gives a luncheon.

This popular bride-elect will be honored by Miss Dorothy Archer at the Mirador Room on Aug. 20, and on Aug. 25 Miss Mary Ann Braungart gives a spinster dinner and Raymond Murrah gives a stag party for the groom-elect. Mrs. Clinton Morgan's luncheon is on Aug. 26, and that evening Mr. and Mrs. George Braungart, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Yancey, Jr., entertain following the rehearsal. Others who will honor this attractive pair are Misses Betty Brown, Vivian Newberry, Helen Roberts, Mrs. Leonard Anderson, and Mr. and Mrs. William Sproesser.

Mrs. John Stiga To Honor Sister

An informal affair of Friday will be the buffet luncheon at which Mrs. John Stiga will entertain at her home on West Wesley Road.

Honor guest will be her sister, Miss Helen Stiga, of New York, who is being honored at a round of informal parties. She will return to her home on Monday.

SALLY FORTH Says:

When Charles Dimon, Jr., takes his bride, Irene Adair, to his native city of Colmbus for residence, everything will be in readiness for them to set up housekeeping in a brand-new home on Eighteenth Avenue. The house, of Dutch Colonial style, is the wedding gift of Charles' parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Dimon, of Columbus. And that is not all! Irene's mother, Mrs. Forrest Adair, Jr., has given them a brand-new car as her wedding gift.

Irene, who is a beautiful brunette, will wear the blush satin wedding dress belonging to her cousin, the former Marianna Adair, who wore it when she became Mrs. William Rees. She and Charles will be married at a fashionable high-noon ceremony on Sept. 6 at the Cathedral of St. Philip, the service to be followed by a breakfast to be given by Mrs. Adair at the Piedmont Driving Club. An interesting angle to the wedding is that Tom Moorman, who served the Adair family for more than 25 years, and who recently went to New Jersey to work, has asked permission to drive "Miss Irene" to the church for the service.

Irene will be given in marriage by her brother, Forrest Adair, III, and Mrs. Adair, the former Elsa McCall, will be the matron of honor. Janet Appleby will be the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Bess Lundeen, Mimi Wilkins, Martha Mann, and Sylvia Vega, of Puerto Rico.

Homer Dimon, III, will be best man for his brother, and the ushers and groomsmen will be Harry Woodward, R. M. Harris, Miller Williams, of Montgomery; Robert Gregg, of Birmingham; Frank and Tom Pease, of Columbus; Midshipman Tommy Tift and Midshipman David Allen, of the U. S. Naval Academy; DeWitt Moffett, of Elizabethton, Tenn.; George Matthews, Moffett Flournoy, William Martin and William Dillard, of Columbus. Dean Raimundo de Ovies and Dean John Walthour will officiate at the ceremony, which will be among important events of the early Fall.

Goodrum Norrises Hosts at Barbecue

Atlanta friends have received invitations, cleverly written in rhyme, to attend a barbecue to be given this evening by Jean and Goodrum Norris at their country home near Newnan.

Motorists who frequent the Atlanta highway between Palmetto and Newnan are familiar with the beautiful pastoral scene presented by the Norris home which sits far back from the road against a backdrop of giant oaks. It is flanked on one side by a crystal-clear lake, and is approached by a winding drive bordered alternately with dogwoods and crepe myrtles. Contented cows graze in the wide meadow in front of the home, after the manner of English manor houses.

In this delightful setting, a host of Atlanta friends will enjoy the 'cue to be held at 6 o'clock. Jean, it seems, is responsible for the rhyming of the invitations.

Mrs. Longstreet Honored in Greenville

It was a gala day yesterday in Atlanta's neighboring city of Greenville, when the prime visitor was Mrs. Helen Dortch Longstreet, widow of the famed Confederate general.

Mrs. Longstreet went to Greenville at the invitation of Maj. Emmett Irvin, retired, who happens to be the only person now living who served in the State Capitol at the same time Mrs. Longstreet was librarian there. He, it seems, was executive secretary to the late Gov. Terrell at that time. It was in honor of this cherished association with the noble lady that he arranged an interesting program of entertainment for her visit.

Mrs. Longstreet was met by an impressive hospitality committee, composed of the leaders of the various civic, cultural, and philanthropic organizations in Greenville. After a tour of the city she was central figure at a luncheon given at the New Era Club house, and later at a tea. One hundred and fifty prominent citizens of Greenville and Meriwether County gathered to meet the distinguished visitor.

NEWS ABOUT GEORGIA

Compiled From State News Service Reports

Plans for a proposed $50,000 Methodist student center at the University of Georgia have been announced by the Rev. R. C. Singleton, Director of the University Wesley Foundation.

This project will be the first of its type sponsored by Methodists in Georgia. Construction has been approved and a considerable portion of the estimated costs raised. Tentative plans call for construction on Lumpkin Street, near the campus. Features of the center will be a recreation room, chapel, library, club rooms, living room and lounge, an outdoor playground, and offices and an apartment for the director.

Construction on the $50,000 bus station at Marietta is expected to begin this week.

Fort Gaines will be the scene of a gala veterans' day celebration Aug. 7, with two ball games, a barbecue, round and square dancing, and a jet plane exhibition, according to American Legion Post No. 118.

The Macon Telegraph and the Macon News have purchased stock in the Macon Broadcasting Company which owns Macon Station WNEX. The publishing company has withdrawn its application for a frequency modulation station. WNEX plans FM transmission.

Camp Meetin' Time

What is believed to be the only Presbyterian meeting of its kind, the week-long camp meeting at the Smyrna Church in Rockdale County, near Conyers, will begin Friday. The Rev. Bonneau Dickson, of the Rock Springs Church in Atlanta, will conduct morning and evening services at the annual meeting which was begun in 1831 . . . The Union Grove Holiness camp meeting in White County also will begin Friday . . . Revival services began Sunday at the Mud Creek Baptist Church near Alto.

'One-Carrot' Ring

Mrs. Ruth Ripley, of Moultrie, now has a "one-carrot" wedding ring. Her gold band, lost two years ago in her father's garden, has turned up around the tip of a carrot which her mother, Mrs. L. J. Blucher, pulled from the vegetable plot.

Politics and Town Talk

George L. Fox has been elected sheriff of Gordon County to fill the unexpired term of the late Lee Erwin . . . Bainbridge Mayor E. W. Cox and his aldermanic board will ask for an "indorsement term" at the polls on Sept. 17 . . . Carrollton and Waycross have city primaries for Sept. 20 and Sept. 23 respectively . . . Oscar Adams, former Toomsboro School Superintendent, will assume duties as superintendent of Arlington High School on Aug. 27 . . . Miss Pauline Rankin and James Willis Haskel, of Toccoa, have received the R. G. LeTourneau scholarships for 1947-48. Miss Rankin has won the scholarship for LeTourneau employees four times . . . Bids for a new grammar school at Carrollton will be received until 2 p. m. Aug. 18.

Lotta Corn

As Crisp and Walton Counties near completion of their corn production contests, Toombs County comes through with a stalk of corn bearing 21 ears on one stem. Cliff Collins grew it on his farm near Lyons.

But, shucks, the freak crop of "rosn' ears" is of little use except for the record.

Half Million in Loans

The annual report of the Satilla Production Credit Association at Waycross shows that 516 loans totaling $500,052 have been made in the past six months to farmers in Brantley, Camden, Charlton, Clinch, Glynn, Pierce, Ware and Wayne Counties . . . Hancock County is becoming a "cow pea center," with 1,000 acres in the $50-a-ton crop. A Sparta firm buys the peas for a cannery in Haddock.

Note to FDR Obtained Flat Top Order--Kaiser

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—Henry J. Kaiser said Tuesday he obtained a wartime order for 100 baby flat tops by sending a note to the late President Roosevelt after the Navy turned thumbs down on the contract.

He recalled making no such appeal for a contract to build 200-ton cargo planes.

The bustling industrialist told the Senate War Investigating Committee that his efforts to put these huge flying boats into mass production to combat the submarine menace in 1942 met with a "mysterious kiss-off."

Kaiser testified at a stormy session that a former War Production Board official was in league with aircraft manufacturers to keep him out of the business.

"In my opinion," he said, "it was a beautiful frame-up to kill the aircraft cargo program, and it succeeded."

Kaiser told his story in connection with the Committee's investigation of $40,000,000 worth of aircraft contracts let to him and to Howard Hughes, millionaire Hollywood plane builder and motion picture producer. The contracts cover one 200-ton cargo plane still to be flown and two experimental photo reconnaissance planes yet to be put in use by the Army.

Kaiser and Hughes undertook to build the cargo plane, but Kaiser eventually pulled out of this contract and Hughes took over. Hughes also handled the photo plane job.

The Committee is trying to find out whether any White House pressure was brought to bear in the awarding of the contracts. It particularly wants to know whether Elliott Roosevelt, son of the late President, used any influence.

At the outset Tuesday Kaiser lost a hectic half-hour argument over his demand that he be allowed to present a prepared statement to the committee, and protested that he has been the victim of a "smear campaign."

Then, in reply to questions, Kaiser testified he sent a brief note to President Roosevelt in 1942 in connection with a proposal to build small aircraft carriers.

This testimony developed when Sen. Ferguson, Republican, Michigan, Chairman of the subcommittee conducting the hearing, asked Kaiser whether he ever had gone "to the White House" about his cargo plane proposition.

Kaiser said he could not remember, but he had talked to the late Marvin McIntyre, Secretary to President Roosevelt, about building small aircraft carriers, known as baby flat tops, for the Navy.

The West Coast industrialist recounted that McIntyre had suggested that if Kaiser would "write a little letter of about four paragraphs" that McIntyre would "lay it on the Chief's desk."

The next day, Kaiser said, he received a call from Adm. Emory S. Land, Chief of the Maritime Commission, who asked:

"What the hell have you been doing?"

Mr. Roosevelt's letter, Kaiser told the Committee, caused top Navy officials to "reverse" themselves and "I got an order for 100 carriers." This, he added, later was cut to 50. He said that finally the Navy "turned the heat of hell on us to produce more."

In reply to further questions, Kaiser said he knew of no such note in connection with flying boats.

"They told me that was hopeless," Kaiser said.

Merrill C. Meigs, former chief of WPB's aircraft division, testified Monday that Government experts regarded Kaiser's flying boat as "fantastic" and recommended against it, but that they were overruled by Donald M. Nelson, WPB Chairman.

It was Meigs who Kaiser said was in league with "certain aircraft manufacturers" to keep him out of the business.

Ferguson asked Kaiser whether he had design plans for cargo planes when he entered into negotiations with WPB in 1942. Kaiser replied that he probably had only sketches, and added:

"All I had when I came (to the Navy) with an aircraft carrier that practically won the war was a picture—a wash drawing."

FARM YOUTHS CHEER

'49 Encampment At Jekyll Isle?

More than 100 farm boys and girls cheered as Act. Gov. Thompson Tuesday expressed hopes they could hold their Summer encampment in 1949 on Jekyll Island.

The youths, members of the 4-H Clubs of Greene, Columbia and Jefferson Counties, visited the Governor's Office while attending a State encampment at College Park.

Questioned by Thompson, more than half of the boys and girls said they had never seen the ocean.

In conversation with the group, Thompson recalled the days when he, as a boy, won the Jenkins County corn growing championship in a Corn Club and was awarded a week's trip to the Southeastern Fair.

Demo Director Fined $100 on Driving Charge

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 29—(AP)—State Motor Vehicle Registrar Laure B. Lussier announced Tuesday he had suspended indefinitely the Rhode Island driving rights of Gael Sullivan, Executive Director of the Democratic National Committee.

The action was taken, Lussier said, because of Sullivan's conviction July 14 on a charge of dangerous driving. Sullivan pleaded guilty in District Court in Wakefield, R. I., and paid a $100 fine.

Sullivan was arrested the night of July 3 in Wakefield after his car and another were in collision. He was charged with drunken driving but a rookie policeman failed to inform him of his right to choose his own doctor for a sobriety test and police said they were forced to reduce the charge to dangerous driving.

SWEARS IN BENCH CHOICE

Thompson Appointment Rule: Pick Only Friends

As he swore in Harvey Kennedy, of Barnesville, as Judge of the Flint Superior Court Circuit Tuesday afternoon, Acting Gov. Thompson let it be known that he would never reach into the camp of his enemies to hand out rewards.

"If I ever have any appointments to make and I do not have a friend available to take it," said Thompson, "I will delay making that appointment until I can find a friend capable of filling the position."

Thompson said he based his appointment of Kennedy on the latter's friendship and ability. Kennedy is Mayor of Barnesville and leader of the "Aroused Citizens of Georgia," anti-Talmadge political faction.

The induction of Kennedy into office came earlier than originally planned because Judge Ogden Persons, retiring judge, requested that a successor take over immediately.

Harper Holds to Time Limit For Reply on Fire Curb Action

Asked for a 30-day time extension by the Georgian Terrace Hotel, City Building Inspector Marvin Harper insisted Tuesday that the hotel get on record within five days with either acceptance or rejection of recommendations he has made for the hotel building to conform to fire safety laws.

Harper pointed out that the hotel was inspected and served with a notice of structural deficiencies last February and has since been granted ample time extension to carry an appeal of his rulings to the City Building Code Advisory Board.

"I want to know what the hotel's intentions are," he said, "and I want them to get on record about what they are going to do."

Asked what would be the City's next step if the hotel failed to reply or rejected his recommendations, the Building Inspector said:

"We are going into court."

The operators of hte 11-story hotel at Peachtree and Ponce de Leon have protested that compliance with Harper's ruling that the hotel's stairways be enclosed would be so expensive as to work an "unbearable hardship."

The Building Code Advisory Board a week ago recommended two alternatives—that the stairways be enclosed or sprinklers installed throughout. Harper accepted the stairway enclosure recommendation but not the sprinkler installation alternative.

"The law says the stairways must be enclosed," Harper said, "and the law gives me no discretionary powers."

Harper added that installation of sprinklers can be accepted as an alternative on some smaller buildings, but not on hotel structures of such height as the Georgian Terrace where firemen might not be able to reach occupants trapped on the upper floors by fire.

The Building Code Advisory Board which made the alternative recommendations to Harper is headed by George H. Bond as Chairman. A five-man panel of the Board which inspected the hotel was headed by C. F. Nonnemaker as Chairman. Bond is a member of Cooper, Bond and Cooper, architects and engineers who were employed by the Georgian Terrace to study plans to bring the structure in compliance with the code.

The Board's stairway enclosure recommendation calls for the additional safeguard of a sprinkler system below the second floor and other provisions including fire doors between the elevator lobby and passage to the service corridor on each bedroom floor.

Dewey Ellis, Manager of the Georgian Terrace, who asked Harper for 30 days additional time Tuesday, had "no comment" when asked by a reporter if the hotel plans to fight further the Building Inspector's ruling.

Florida Sells Georgia Soil to U. S. for Dam

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 29—(AP)—The State of Florida Tuesday sold the U. S. Government 121 acres of land it owns in Georgia and gave an option of 30 more acres for use in construction of the proposed multi-million-dollar Jim Woodruff dam across the Chattahoochee River.

The State Cabinet declined to donate the holdings of the State Hosptal.

Bids will be accepted Sept. 9 at Mobile for construction of the dam.

The U. S. agency asked the cabinet to donate the 121-acre plot which it appraised at $1,920 and F. E. Wilkinson, real estate manager for the U. S. Engineers, suggested it was a question of whether the State wanted to embark on a policy of donation.

"I think it's a question of whether the Federal Government is going out with a tin cup and ask for donations," Gov. Caldwell replied.

Wilkinson agreed to the $1,920 price, less the value of whatever timber is cut on the 121-tract and turned over to the State Hospital.

The Engineers also took a six-month option to purchase the other 30 acres for $6,000 less the salvage value of a house the hospital has on the tract. Both tracts are in the hospital's holdings just north of the Georgia line.

Strong Quakes Recorded At Bogota, Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia, July 29—(AP)—The Rev. Jesus Emilio Ramirez, Director of the Geophysical Institute here, said his seimsmograph recorded two strong earthquakes Tuesday.

The first tremor, recorded at 7:51 a. m., Eastern Standard Time, had an epicenter about 900 miles from Bogota and a strong North-South wave center.

At 9:03 a. m., Eastern Standard Time, a temblor was recorded at about 10,500 miles or near the Antipodes Islands in the South Pacific.

COLUMBUS ROBERTS SAYS:

Kan't Bar a Klavern From Baptist Rites

By JOHN KOURIK

When Ku Klux Klansmen go to church as a Klavern they must wear their bed sheets because they kannot disklose their identities, Grand Dragon Samuel Green said here Tuesday.

Meanwhile, in Columbus, Columbus Roberts, President of the Georgia Baptist Convention, said his church has no rules to prevent hooded attendance. Each unit is autonomous, he explained.

Roberts and the Green, pardon, Grand Dragon offered these amplifying remarks following publication that 100 KKK members, in robes, attended Sunday night services at Inman Yards Baptist Church here.

Of course, the Dragon explained, some other Kluxers still do not have robes, and they attended as private citizens. "Shortage of material during the war," the Grand Dragon explained apologetically. Apparently, most white cloth went into white shirts for returning servicemen and not for robes for Klan konverts.

Green, who "Ku Kluxes for fun and practices medicine for a living," said he "understood" a Church of God—"I don't know which one"—also has invited a Klavern to attend kombination religious services.

"But," he added, "I haven't been asked for a permit to allow publik appearances in robes."

Discussing his power, he said: "You see as Grand Dragon I kan make certain rules. No Klansman is allowed to appear in publik or on the highways in robes unless he first sekures a permit from the Grand Dragon."

The Rev. E. E. Peek, who preached the Sunday night sermon, drew his sermon partially from the Twelfth Chapter of Romans. He was out of town Monday and Tuesday.

"The Klan is built on the Twelfth Chapter of Romans, most particularly the First Verse," Dragon Green declared.

"This verse admonished one to be kontent with one's station. In the Klan, those who are privates in the rear ranks are told to accept their station in the Klan and think soberly of those who are apparently their superior officers."

Chaplains in each Klan reportedly are known as Kluds; another officer is the Cyklops. Green did not say whether any were called Klucks.

Russian Veto In UN Blocks Balkan Probe

LAKE SUCCESS, July 29—(AP)—Russia Tuesday killed an American proposal for an 11-nation Border Commission in the Balkans with a veto.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko calmly raised his hand to defeat the resolution after abstaining throughout 10 preliminary paragraph-by-paragraph ballots. It was the eleventh time in UN history that Russia had invoked the big power veto.

The final vote was 9 to 2 with Poland joining Gromyko in opposition.

Herschel V. Johnson, Deputy American Delegate, said the Soviet veto created a "grave situation," and called for immediate adjournment of the Council to allow delegates to consult their home governments.

Gromyko, who had been writing a lengthy speech in long hand during Tuesday's Council sessions, attempted to get the floor but the Council voted 8 to 1 to uphold the surprise American move for adjournment. The Council will meet again Wednesday at 3 p. m. EDT.

Gromyko's action killed the entire Ameican proposal growing out of a report of an on-the-spot commission sent into the turbulent Balkans last January by the Council. The proposal had been under debate for more than a month and speculation ran high as to whether Russia would veto or abstain on the final ballot.

Gromyko last used the veto March 25 to kill a Council decision finding Albania had knowledge of laying mines in the Corfu Channel which damaged two British warships. The only other veto in Council history was by France, when Alexandre Parodi associated himself with a Russian veto in the Spanish case in June, 1946.

LONG AND SHORT OF IT:

Movie Fashion Designer Solves Skirt Problem

By ALINE MOSBY

HOLLYWOOD, July 28—(UP) A movie fashion designer triumphantly unveiled today his new creation that he figures will halt the nation's bitter long vs. short skirt battle.

Eddie Stevenson's solution: A dress with a long-short skirt.

It's long, but it's short, too. In other words, Eddie whipped up an outfit with two skirts that you ladies can wear at the same time without your men lamenting that their gams are covered up.

The long skirt is transparent.

Now, said Eddie happily, women can be stylish in long skirts and show off their pins at the same time.

Stevenson was driven to this startling discovery, he explained, because of the activities of a fellow coNeague at RKO studio, Designer Renie. Eddie was nose deep in designing Rosalind Russell's hoop skirts for "Mourning Becomes Electra" when he spied Jane Greer tripping out of Renie's office next door in a long, long skirt.

All that could be seen of Miss G.'s gams, he discovered, was an inch or two of ankles.

Stevenson recovered in time to snare Jane down the hall.

"Well, Renie thinks I should wear them because they're stylish in the East this season," she explained.

Stevenson, stunned, charged into Renie's quarters to find out how come.

"It's an historical cycle," announced Renie, determined to make more of a success with her long skirt than she did with her frontless evening gown.

"After every war comes a drastic fashion change. The bustle came in after the War Between the States. And the transparent bodices after the Napoleonic wars. Skirts went up after World War I, didn't they?"

No place for 'em to go this time but down, she concluded.

Besides, she added, women feel, act and look more ladylike and feminine in longer skirts. This they want, she insisted, because they're tired of the masculine WAC uniforms and war workers' slacks of the war.

"Short skirts should stay," cried Stevenson. "Women want the freedom of action of a short skirt. Men want to see women's legs. Besides, short skirts, not long, are more feminine."

This only evened up the argument so Stevenson retired to his office to break the deadlock. After hours of frantic sketching, he huzzahed that he had the solution. A dark, sort skirt and a transparent, long overskirt.

"The overskirt makes legs look even more seductive," he said. "Sort of the principal of a chiffon nightie. Covered up, to conform with style, but a teasing suggestion of what's underneath."

The ladies now can stop letting down the hems of their old, short skirts, pointed out Eddie. Instead, just wear over 'em the Stevenson overskirt.

Miss Greer was inclined to agree with Stevenson.

"It's a wonderful idea," she said. "Heavens, it was going to cost me five thousand dollars to buy some new clothes with long skirts."

Renie, however, stood pat. She said with skirts down, necklines soon will drop, too. Then where will Stevenson's male supporters be? Right on her side, said she.

Cook's Notebook

By SALLY SAVER

SPICE STRIPS

½ cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar
2 beaten eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup light cream
1 cup sifted enriched flour
¼ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1-3 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
2-3 cup chopped nuts

Cream shortening and sugar; add eggs, vanilla and beat until mixture is light and fluffy. Sift dry ingredients together and add alternately with cream. Stir in nuts. Bake in a 9 by 12-inch pan in 350-degree oven for 30 minutes. Cool and cut in inch-wide strips and roll in confectioners' sugar, if desired. (2 dozen strips.)

SALMON CAKES

1 cup flaked cooked or canned salmon
1 1-2 cups hot freshly mashed potatoes
1 egg, well beaten
Salt and pepper to taste
1-4 teaspoon thyme
2 or 3 tablespoons drippings

Combine mashed potatoes and salmon; add egg and seasonings. Shape into 6 large or 12 small flat cakes. Saute in drippings until well browned on both sides. Serve with tomato sauce, if desired. (Serves 6).

BEETS, POLISH STYLE

5 tablespoons margarine
Small beets
1½ tablespoons flour
¾ cup beet water
¾ teaspoon lemon juice
1½ tablespoons sugar
3-8 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons sour cream

Cook and drain beets. Slice, if desired. Melt margarine in saucepan, add flour and stir until smooth. Add remaining ingredients, bring to a boil, and boil 1 minute. Pour over hot beets and serve. Yield: 6 servings.

CAPT. CORNWELL:

'LittleAmerica'Little? 'Bigger'n'U.S.,Europe

By BILL BORING.

When Adm. Richard E. Byrd's Expedition returned from its last year's trip to "Little America" it straightened out one thing if nothing else. That is that "Little America" isn't little. It's larger than the United States plus Europe.

"Little America," of course, is loosely referred to as the Antarctica but actually is the infinitesimal part on which Adm. Byrd has headquarters on his several expeditions to that vast land mass "down under."

CAPT. D. S. CORNWELL
Carrier Skipper to Antarctica

Until the last Byrd expedition nobody knew just how big a chunk of land the Antarctica was, but thanks to the efforts of Capt. D. S. Cornwell and his officers and crew of the USS Philippine Sea—and to the worthiness of the Philippine Sea itself—we now know enough about it to enable cartographers to map it with accuracy.

Capt. Cornwell, who is visiting William E. Huger, an old friend, at his home, 95 Valley Rd., N. E., made history when he got six DC-3's through to Adm. Byrd on "Little America."

The big ships were used in exploratory missions from Byrd's base of operations and thanks to them—and to the pilots and crews who manned them, and the geographers and scientists making observations and studies from them—we now know the Antarctica's size and more of the nature of its terrain.

The aerial exploratory missions charted the vast continent's coastline, observed its topography. Vast stretches of bare land, and of mineral formations were observed. We now know that should necessity ever compel us to go to this extreme inconvenience in transport, we could tap this land mass for untold wealth in coal, oil.

We now know something of the continent's topography. Towering mountains, some 15,000 feet high, were observed. We know, too, that the Antarctica is a complete land mass and not, as the Arctic region, an ice mass. The Antarctica is the only uninhabited land mass in the world. The world's last land frontier.

It is a land of breathless beauty, a land where there is intermittently months of total darkness and months of brilliant sunlight—a land inhabited only, apparently, by penguins; where temperatures sometimes plunge to 70 below zero; where violent storms arise at minute's notice—winds of 80 to 100 miles an hour. The air is crystalline, clearer than anything imaginable, for there's not a speck of dust on land or in the air in the Antarctica.

Capt. Cornwell took the USS Philippine Sea to within 600 miles of "Little America." From this point the huge ships—largest ever launched from an aircraft carrier—took off with rocket assists.

The USS Philippine Sea was the largest craft ever to penetrate these dangerous waters, which were filled with icebergs and overhung by fog.

For two weeks, the USS Philippine Sea sailed through a sea of icebergs, some more than six miles long and from 300 to 400 feet high. Capt. Cornwell's job was to give them wide berth, which he did.

He says most icebergs are shaped like shoeboxes. They drift with the current after breaking from the ice mass at Winter's end.

The only living thing he saw on the trip were albatrosses—which he described as similar to huge sea gulls—and whales. There are more whales in the Anarctica waters than anywhere else in the seas, he estimated.

Pope Plans Trip To Mountain Palace

VATICAN CITY, July 29—(AP) Pope Pius XII plans to leave Wednesday for Castel Gandolfo, papal Summer residence in the mountains south of Rome, to escape the intense heat of the Roman Summer, an informed prelate said Tuesday. He said the Pontiff would remain in the mountains until the middle of September, or perhaps until October.

There have been reports in Rome that the Pope had been suffering from sleeplessness, but the prelate said these were "only as true for me as for everyone else trying to sleep in this heat."

The mercury reached 97 Monday and official predictions were that it would be even hotter Wednesday.

Parity Price Of Peanuts Set At 11.1 Cents

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported Tuesday that the parity price of peanuts as of July 15 was 11.1 cents a pound.

The average price received by growers as of the same date was 9.55 cents.

The mid-July parity price will be used by the Agriculture Department as a basis for determining levels at which the Government will support grower prices of this year's crop. The Department is required by law to support grower prices at not less than 90 percent of the parity price as of July 15.

Formal announcement of the price support program is expected within a few days.

An order has been prepared which would direct the Department's Commodity Credit Corporation to support grower prices by purchasing No. 2 peanuts.

The CCC would buy a specified quantity of No. 2 peanuts for each thousand pounds of No. 1 peanuts sold to the trade for edible purposes. The proportion will be worked out for each type and producing area later.

BENDIX DEALERS MEET—More than 450 appliance dealers and salesmen, distributors of Bendix automatic washers, met Tuesday at the Ansley Hotel to discuss ways of maintaining a high volume of sales. Charles S. Martin, President of the Charles S. Martin Distributing Company, host at the meeting, greets N. D. Craighead, Sales Manager of Ironer Division, Bendix Homes Appliances, Inc., principal speaker who explained a million-dollar sales contest.

Thompson Seeks Funds For Rural Hospitals

Acting Gov. Thompson declared Tuesday he will ask the 1949 Legislature to appropriate funds to build rural hospital in Georgia and make this appropriation retroactive to the present time.

Although anxious to see rural hospitals built, Thompson said he could not spend money for this purpose because the Legislature had failed to pass such an appropriation bill.

"Whether I am Chief Executive of Georgia in 1949 or not, it is my purpose to send to the 1949 General Assembly a recommendation that the State match Federal funds for rural hospital construction, and that this appropriation be made retroactive as of the date Federal funds become operative," Thompson said.

The Acting Governor commended Congress for passing the Hill-Burton Bill providing funds for rural hospital building. He said a number of cities and counties already have contacted him saying they have local funds with which to start hospital construction, and asking whether they should proceed in their program with local and Federal funds since the General Assembly did not pass any appropriation for State aid.

Thompson suggested that cities and counties contact State Health Commissioner T. F. Abercrombie as they proceed with their plans, since the State Health Department has charge of distributing the Federal funds. Then, Thompson will try to obtain State funds in 1949 to reimburse the local communities for part of their expenditures.

The House passed an appropriation bill which included an appropriation of $1,000,000 for rural hospital construction, but the bill died in the Senate.

Thompson also commended Congress for passing the school lunch-room bill and a bill continuing aid to teachers in defense plant areas. These bills will be very beneficial to Georgia, he said.

Chinese Revive Trade Charter

Atlanta Chinese have revived the On Leong Chinese Merchants Association by securing a new charter from Judge Walter C. Hendrix, of Fulton Superior Court.

Representing Atlanta's Chinese, S. Olive Young, whose father headed the old association, said that the charter had been allowed to lapse because of the decline in the Chinese population. He expressed the belief that the crime rate among Chinese in the United States was lower proportionately than that of any other group. He pointed out that there are no Chinese on relief.

Young said there were about 50 Chinese in Atlanta and about 400 in Georgia. Other petitioners for the charter were David Jung, George Pon, Loo Sang, Louis and Harry Loo. After Judge Hendrix signed the charter the petitioners presented him with a box of tea.

Stock Sales

NEW YORK, July 29—(AP)—Stocks today suffered one of their sharpest relapses of the past several months as late heavy liquidation put the high speed ticker tape behind for the first time since May 16 and cut down market leaders 1 to more than 3 points.

Various explanations were given for the tumble. Persistent weakness of the London market, slumping commodities and the belief a substantial technical correction of the lengthy upswing was at hand were thought to have inspired offerings from both professional and investment quarters. Inflationary psychology remained as a prop but this was offset by further talk of a "boom-bust" cycle. Dividends and earnings generally were ignored.

There were slowdowns after an active opening but, approaching the final hour, a flood of offerings hit the exchange and put the recording machinery in arrears as much as two minutes for about a quarter of an hour. The pace then tapered and a little short covering and quick-turn bidding reduced extreme declines in the majority of cases at the close. Transfers of 1,390,000 shares compared with 1,090,000 Monday and were a top since last Thursday.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was down 1.3 points at 66.4, biggest tumble since April 14. It was the broadst market since July 14. Of 1,072 issues registering, 865 fell and only 100 rose.

Railroad issues faltered in their Summer forward stride in the bond market today. As the session entered the final hour losses ranged to around 2 points. A handful of plus signs appeared.

In the curb a raised quarterly lifted Humble Oil 1¼ points. Backward were Aluminum of America, Cities Service, Electric Bond & Share, Textron and American Gas.

JOHNNY BRADBERRY

Winning Team Makes Baseball Fans Hungry

(Sports Editor Johnny Bradberry is on vacation. During his absence his column will be written by members of the Sports Staff.)

By GEORGE TISINGER

Atlanta baseball fans are the hungriest when their boys are winning. Take as an authority Raul Ovares, ball park concessions manager. And Raul ought to know, for he's been bossing the hot dawg slappers-together since 1935 out at Ponce de Leon Park.

Raul says that even though he is down under the stands, he knows whether or not the Crackers are ahead. For when they are the fans track down in even greater hordes than before and line up at his counter. And a hot dawg sale usually means another bottle of C—— C—— or a harder beverage.

"Don't know why it is," Raul observes, "but I can always tell a Cracker rally by the sudden jump in sales. Must be the excitement or somethin' that stirs their appetites."

The boss of the vendors says that on a good day his boys will sell 2,500 to 2,700 wieners and as high as 800 cases of that soft drink.

He usually employs about 55 hustlers to work the stands and about 30 countermen to serve two main grandstand and two bleacher stands.

Raul sees a lot of humans in his business and knows a lot about their nature.

In connection with his other activities he is chief of the lost-and-found department and has everything reported lost, strayed or stolen from diamond rings to assorted children whose mamas and papas lose sight of them when the game waxes interesting.

In fact, many years ago a gentleman lost a shoe—an expensive brown one. At 2 a. m. that night after the game a frantic telephone call came through, saying its owner would be down shortly after daylight to retrieve same. No owner came and they still have the shoe.

Some old-timers work in the concessions department, too, just as they do on the gates, etc. Among them is Jerome Spiller, brother of the late Rell J., who formerly owned the park when it was known as Spiller Field. Mr. Jerome has been working there more than 25 years.

Fans Call Park The telephone number is VErnon 3535, and it must be known to everybody in this section of Georgia, for the baseball fan must know how his team is doing even if he can't be there to cheer it on. Mrs. Maudelle Hinton, Assistant Secretary to the Baseball Corporation, says that she and the other office assistants handle hundreds of calls during a game. The 'phone is constantly ringing. And figuring one call every 10 seconds, that's a lot of conversation during a single two-hour game.

Office assistants include Mrs. Ruth Morgan and Eustice Spear and they have a full job of work when the game is on.

Field General Donaldson Jasper Donaldson, Secretary and Traveling Secretary, handles his job of a thousand details like the smartest field general. Jasper bosses a goodly number of the 266 employees on the ball park pay roll. His headaches start with the ticket sales. And one of his biggest problems is reserved seat reservations.

"Our tickets for each day's game are at the downtown booth until an hour or so before game time," Jasper reminds us. "For that reason we have many an irate fan who wishes to make a reservation by calling the ball park. Naturally we can't do this, for if we made reservations here, we would then have to contact the downtown office where all the tickets are kept. It takes time, often hours, to get them at the downtown spot and in the meantime the particular block of seats desired might have been sold. It's easy to see why we can have only one sales center before a game."

The "Cleanup" Gang Interesting indeed is the story of the unsung men who clean up the park after you and I go home. Section chief here is the popular "Hub" Hubbard, Park Superintendent. Hub will settle back and tell you a few amazing facts. After last Sunday's double-header, for instance, Hub and his platooon of 19 helpers gathered up 29,000 drink bottles and three and a half truckloads of debris such as peanut hulls, cigarette stubs, popcorn boxes and the like.

That's a lot to have underfoot!

Hub's job begins about daylight on the day of the game and ends about one or two o'clock the next morning. And it includes a variety of things.

He's chief custodian of the balls, important things around a ball park.

Before a single game he issues as a rule 18 baseballs. For a two-header it is 36. He has a crew of 14 ball boys and two bat boys. You've seen them fetching and carrying around the lot.

It was during last Sunday's double-header that he lost 24 balls, fouled into and over the stands and one in the tall grass way out yonder.

Hub says a fan had rather keep a ball than turn it in and get the traditional free pass to a future game. It seems that only five balls were turned back by finders during the 1946 season, and so far this year only one ball has been swapped for a pass.

Other statistics of Hub's include the 2,200 pounds of rye grass seed used on the infield and outfield last Winter to make the lot playable and the 32 truckloads of sifted dirt

Vols Jump on Crackers for 7-3 Victory

Atlanta Maintains Third Place; Wade, Cook To Hurl Series Finale

By F. M. WILLIAMS.

Jumping off into a four-run lead in the second inning, the Nashville Vols turned back the Atlanta Crackers, 7 to 3, before a crowd of 12,155 including ladies, Tuesday night at Ponce de Leon Park.

The victory evened the series with one win apiece and set the stage for a ding-dong battle in the finale Wednesday night.

Ben Wade, ace of the Vol staff, and Barney Cook, right-handed knuckle-baller, are scheduled to oppose one another in Wednesday's tilt.

The loss didn't alter the Crackers' third-place standing as the Chattanooga Lookouts dropped a decision to the Birmingham Barons, and it still left Ki Ki Cuyler's club with the enviable record of 12 wins the last 17 times out.

Nashville jumped into a comfortable lead in the second, although it wasn't all Dewey Adkins' fault. The lanky right-hander was after his fourth straight victory and he might have earned it with a little more luck.

Anyway, in the fourth, Hal Jeffcoat hit a hot grounder that took one hop off the ground and two off Tony Ordenana's head to open the inning. It was a hit, naturally. Cy Block forced Jeffcoat and Buster Boguskie flied to left, but then Hal Quick bounced a slow one to short and beat it out for a hit.

The ball, hit with Block racing for second, ordinarily would have been an easy out, but Ordenana was going over to cover on Block's steal and couldn't get back in time.

Then Pitcher Pete Mallory singled to left, driving Block home. Leon Treadway looped one into left and when Babe Ellis failed by inches to make a desperate catch, it went for a three-run homer.

Ellis slammed out his 16th homer of the season for the Crackers' first run in the fourth inning, and the Cuylermen worked themselves back into the running with two more in the sixth. Ellis started that rally with a single and when Quick bobbled Glock's roller, all hands were safe. Red Mathis forced Glock but Logan singled Ellis home and Ordenana singled to drive in Mathis.

That was all for the Crackers, Pete Mallory taking complete charge from there out.

The Vols picked up a tally in the seventh on successive doubles by Treadway and Buster Maynard, who between them gathered seven hits.

They picked up two in the ninth, with a pair of passed balls aiding considerably in both scores. Boguskie singled to deep short to open the inning and went to second when Ordenana threw wild to first. He moved to third as Adkins threw out Quick and scored when Mallory missed an attempted bunt that got by Mathis.

Mallory then singled to center, went to second on another passed ball and scored on Treadway's single.

Ex-Tech Ace Rejoins Skins

MOBILE, Ala., July 29—(AP)—John Steber, of Mobile, former football star at Georgia Tech, will leave Friday to rejoin the Washington Redskins in Los Angeles.

A football star at Murphy High School here, 1935-39, Steber entered the Navy V-12 training program during the war and played football with Georgia Tech, taking part in the Sugar Bowl game of 1944.

North Fulton Receives 1st List of Golf Entries

By BERT PRATHER.

Gordon McNabb, General Chairman of the North Fulton Open golf tournament, scheduled for Sept. 18 through 21, announced Tuesday that he had received the first batch of entries from the PGA office.

Included in this first list were Herman Keiser, the 1946 Augusta Masters' champion; Jim Thomas, Clayton Heafner, the husky Charlotte, N. C., pro who is always up around the top of the leading money winners on the pro circuit; Cary Middlecoff, Ellsworth Vines, the former tennis champion who now holds his own with the pro linksmen; Ed Furgol, George Payton, A. C. Smith and Johnny Palmer.

Most of the big name stars are expected for the tournament, which will carry a $10,000 purse. Chairman McNabb said a field of around 100 would probably compete. Naturally most of the field will be composed of touring pros, but the Committee has stated that it will also invite a select group of amateurs. In this group will be such famous simon pures as Willfred Crossley, the North Fulton ace who Saturday captured the National Publinx title; George Hamer, Columbus' State champion and a member of the 1947 U. S. Walker Cup team, and Southern Champion Tommy Barnes. Hamer was low amateur in the Druid Hills Open here last Fall, beating both Barnes and the pre-tournament favorite, Frank Stranahan, of Toledo, Ohio.

The North Fulton jamboree will be sponsored by the North Fulton Golf Association in co-operation with the Fulton County Parks and Recreation Department.

Tami Fights Lesnevich

BROOKLYN, July 29—(AP)—Gus Lesnevich, world's light heavyweight boxing champion, and Tami Mauriello, the Bronx beer barrel, will try to knock each other's block off Wednesday night in the name of charity.

They tangle in a 10-rounder in Ebbets Field for the Damon Runyon Memorial Cancer Fund. Promoter Andy Niederreiter, who is staging the show along with the New York boxing writers, figures there'll be a gate of $125,000 or so, with some $30,000 going to the war on the dread disease.

Tech's McHugh Joins Pro Ranks

By F. M. WILLIAMS

Pat McHugh, star halfback at Georgia Tech last season, signed a contract with the Philadelphia Eagles, of the National Professional League, Tuesday.

Pat's decision to join the pros ended discussion around the Southeastern Conference as to whether he would have been eligible for another season at Tech.

Officials at The Flats say McHugh would have been eligible since he played the 1942 season while a member of the Air Corps Reserve, subject to immediate call to service. It has been their contention that Pat should be classed as a service man for '42.

Dr. N. W. Dougherty, of the University of Tennessee, Acting SEC Commissioner, said recently that there had been no formal complaint against McHugh filed in his office. He admitted that there had been verbal complaints from several sources, however.

The Acting Commissioner said that the University of Alabama, however, has protested Tech's use of Red Patton this season. He said he would make no decision in this case until after he talks with Tech's W. A. Alexander and 'Bama's Frank Thomas at a meeting in Chicago this week.

Loss of McHugh's services is a tough break for Bobby Dodd.

The Tech mentor faces a tough schedule this season and halfback is one of his biggest problems. There are a number of fine prospective backs at The Flats but Coach Dodd doesn't think they'll be ready for this campaign.

McHugh had an offer from the Los Angeles Dons, of the All-America Conference, but decided Tuesday to join the older National circuit.

He is a native of Orrville, Ala.

Falkenburg, Larned Win In Net Meet

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., July 29—(AP)—Bob Falkenburg, of Hollywood, and Gardner Larned, of Chicago, entered the third round of the 57th annual Men's Invitation Tennis Tournament at the Meadow Club Tuesday but both had to come from behind to stave off defeat.

The third-seeded Falkenburg was pressed by George Pero, of Coral Gables, Fla., a graduate student at the University of Miami, although the lanky Californian recovered from the loss of the first set to triumph, 4-6, 6-1, 6-0.

Larned, seeded eighth, pulled a more amazing rally in his match with 19-year-old Richard (Pancho) Gonzales, the Los Angeles youth who has been cutting a swath in net circles this season.

The National Intercollegiate Champion from William and Mary College was within two points of being beaten by Gonzales before he started to spurt, running out five games to win the second set and taking the match, 3-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Sixth-seeded Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, also won a second-round match, defeating Francis X. Shields, of New York, former No. 1 player of the nation, 6-3, 6-1, and seventh-seeded Sam Match, of San Francisco, entered the third bracket with a 6-1, 6-4 decision over Charles Masterson, of Brooklyn.

In other matches, Victor Seixas, Philadelphia, defeated James Brink, of Seattle, Wash., 6-3, 6-4; Clarence (Nick) Carter, of San Francisco, vanquished Dean Mathey, Jr., of Princeton, N. J., 6-0, 7-5, and Herb Flam, of Beverly Hills, Cal., eliminated the Brazilian Champion, Armande Vieira, 6-2, 6-4.

Arco Wins, 16-7

Arco won their twelfth game of the season Sunday, defeating the Jesup Redbirds, 16-7, at Arco. Fred Depratter and Ross Edwards led the winners at bat, Depratter having 5 for 6, and Edward connecting for a home run.

Arco will meet VFW of Brunswick at Arco today at 4 p. m.

All in all, it's a fairly large undertaking for a big business organization—including a few ball players—to keep a Southern League team in there pitching.

Point System To Determine Ryder Squad

NEW YORK, July 29—(UP)—George Schneiter, Chairman of the Professional Golfers' Association Tournament Committee, Tuesday announced a point system under which players will be selected for the U. S. Ryder Cup team on the basis of PGA-sponsored play between Jan. 1, 1946, and Sept. 1, 1947.

Points on a graded scale will be awarded to the top 10 players in each tournament. First place in both the U. S. Open and the PGA championship will be worth 100 points and second place will rate 60 points in each event.

First and second places in the Masters Tourney will be worth 95 and 57 points, respectively, and first and second places in the Western Open will be allotted 80 and 48 points. Winners of the Miami Four-Ball meet will be awarded 40 points each. In all other PGA-sponsored tournaments, first, second and third places will be allotted 70, 42 and 28 points, respectively, with less for each succeeding place.

5 Boxing Matches Set for Monday

A triple main event will feature the boxing card set for the Municipal Auditorium next Monday night, Aug. 4.

Three eight-round bouts will share equal attention after two preliminaries are run off. Thirty-four rounds of boxing in all are promised the fans.

The program includes: First event, Speedy Jack vs. Sonny Jones (colored lightweights); second event, Sid Rochester vs. Rocky Jones, welterweights; first main event, Eddie Stout, of Oklahoma City (138) vs. Tommy Campbell (140), of Atlanta; second main event, Jimmy Phillips (168), Atlanta, vs. Henry Hopper (160), Atlanta (colored lightheavies); third main event, Gus Aldridge, Macon (155) vs. Jess Wade (153) USMC.

Hogan-Demaret Duo Win in Four-Ball

PITTSBURGH, July 29—(AP)—Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., and Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Cal., the international four-ball champions, defeated Lew Worsham, National Open Champion of Pittsburgh, and Byron Nelson of Denton, Tex., 6 and 4, in a best-ball match, Tuesday before a gallery of 1,000 at the Pittsburgh Field Club.

Major League Attendance Figures Soar Toward Record 19,000,000

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK, July 29—(AP)—Big league attendance figures, usually accepted as an accurate barometer of all sports prosperity, continue to surge toward a new record of some 19,000,000 customers.

With one third of the season remaining, the National League, "running well ahead of 1946" in the words of President Ford Frick, tops the American League by a scant margin.

The unofficial turnstile count from the 16 major league cities shows a grand total of 12,601,110 as compared to the record high of 18,567,465 established for a complete season in 1946.

National League totals, gleaned from daily box score figures as announced by the home clubs, reveal that 6,356,399 have paid their way into the league parks as compared to 6,244,711 in the American.

With the New York Yankees showing the way at 1,455,980, under the impetus of a penant drive, three teams have topped the million mark. The Brooklyn Dodgers have drawn 1,074,372 and the New York Giants 1,013,756. Cleveland, Detroit and Boston in the American and Chicago, Pittsburgh, Boston and St. Louis in the National appear headed for the same select company.

If the Cleveland club continues to pull them through the gates at the same rate during the rest of the year, Bobby Feller's sliding scale contract probably will earn him more cash than any other player in the history of the game. Hank Greenberg, of Pittsburgh, is the only possible exception. There is good reason to believe that Hank is right up there around the $100,000 mark.

The Yankee Stadium crowds continue to amaze the old timers. In 39 home dates, the Yanks have averaged 37,333 customers. With 30 to go, they should eclipse last year's all-time major league high of 2,265,512. If they draw 30,000 for Wednesday afternoon's games with Detroit, they again will have passed the Chicago Cubs' old mark of 1,485,166, that had stood unmolested since 1929 until last season when the Yanks, Dodgers and Tigers all passed it.

Actually there is no mystery about the Yanks' attendance. Night ball is the answer. They packed them in last year with 14 night games and so far in 1947 they have jammed a total of 484,231 into the cavernous arena in nine night dates including one high of 74,747 May 26, when the Boston Red Sox were the attraction.

One dark spot clouds the dollar horizon. The St. Louis Browns are just over the 250,000 level. No other club has drawn less than 500,000. Despite a diet of night ball, twi-night doubleheaders and Sunday doubles, the last-place Brownies have attracted crowds as large as 10,000 on only six occasions. Only once have they topped 20,000, with 25,735 for Boston May 4. Business dropped off to a low of 478 for a July 14 Monday afternoon game with Wasington.

Key, Morris Qualify In Junior Golf Meet

PEORIA, Ill., July 29—(AP)—Wesley Brown, of Chattanooga, and Bob Peters, of Kansas City, Kan., a last-minute arrival using a set of battered clubs, Tuesday shared medal honors with two-under par 142's in the qualifying round of the National Junior Chamber of Commerce golf tournament. After Brown had covered the 36-hole test over Mt. Hawley's 6,426-yard course with 70-72 and was ready to grab the medal, Peters—playing in the last threesome of the 84-boy field—came in with an identical score for the two 18-hole rounds.

In all, 64 teen-agers with scores ranging up to 160 qualified for match play competition which starts Wednesday. Men's regulation par for the course is 36-36—72.

Brown and Peters were the only contenders to break par 144 for 36 holes, but it was equalled by two lads—Illinois State Junior Champion Jimmy Love, of Peoria, with 75 and a three-under par 69, and Gene Littler, of San Diego, Cal., with 71-73.

Walker P. Inman, Jr., of Augusta, was next with 70-76—146, while Billy Key, of Columbus, Ga., one of the pre-meet favorites, had a 73-74—147, to wind up five strokes off the pace. Atlanta's lone entry, Johnny Morris, had anoutgoing 74, but jumped to a 76 on the back nine, for a 150.

Another Augusta boy, Vaughn Maxwell, withdrew after the first 18 holes.

CoMedalist Peters, who arrived late and almost failed to make the last threesome, showed up with a set of dilapidated clubs which were held together by wire, string and tape. The easy-going lad made his medal bid on the final nine, bagging two birdies for a sparkling 34.

'Big Steel,' Bethlehem Hike Price of Product

NEW YORK, July 29—(AP)—U. S. Steel Corporation and Bethlehem Steel Corporation, producers of more than half the nation's steel, completed a cycle of price increases Tuesday which industry sources estimated would take more than $300,000,000 out of consumers' pocketbooks.

The companies announced increases averaging $5 a ton for the raw material for hundreds of finished products.

The new quotations probably will be translated at the retail level into higher prices for such things as automobiles, farm equipment, refrigerators.

The first dent in the steel price front was made late last week by American Rolling Mill Company.

Almost every company stated that higher prices were forced by rising costs. Specifically, Irving S. Olds, U. S. Steel Corporation Chairman, stated after a meeting of "Big Steel" directors Tuesday:

"This increase in steel prices is made necessary by substantially higher employment costs; the mounting costs of raw materials—such as scrap, tin, lead, zinc, copper and palm oil . . . the increased costs of goods and services which these subsidiaries (U. S. Steel Corporation operating subsidiaries) must purchase in order to carry on their business; and the substantially greater cost of replacing worn-out facilities.

"As an illustration of recent higher costs, the price of scrap has advanced more than $10 a ton in the last two months."

Olds stated that the $5 a ton average increase did "not include any amount to cover increased costs which will result from the recent coal labor settlement."

President Truman, in his mid-year economic report to Congress last week, said:

"Increases in the price of steel would have a widespread inflationary effect.

"Steel companies should exercise extraordinary caution at this stage of our reconversion effort to see that increases in coal prices or other costs are offset as fully as possible through the savings of continuous and high-level operation."

Special Group Named For Global Survey

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—A 19-member special House committee was named by Speaker Martin, Republican, Massachusetts, Tuesday to undertake an unprecedented global survey of what can be done to get the world back on its feet economically.

The Committee tentatively plans to sail Aug. 27 for London, where base headquarters will be set up. From there three subcommittees will fan out for on-the-spot studies—one to France and the Low Countries, another to Germany and Austria and a third to Italy, Trieste and Greece.

Rep. Eaton, Republican, New Jersey, Chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, was named head of the special group, but he will remain at home to help co-ordinate its findings with that of special foreign affairs subcommittees planning overseas inquiries.

To Rep. Herter, Republican, Massachusets, one-time aide to Herbert Hoover in relief work after World War I, will fall the task of directing the study as Vice Chairman of the special group. He said it would remain in Europe five weeks before returning to report to Congress.

In addition to Eaton and Herter, these members were named to the special committee: Reps. Jenkins, Republican, Ohio; Wolverton, Republican, New Jersey; Andresen, Republican, Minnesota; Case, Republican, South Dakota; Kunkel, Republican, Pennsylvania; Vory, Republican, Ohio; Vursell, Republican, Illinois; Macy, Republican, New York; Nixon, Republican, California; Colmer, Democrat, Mississippi; Richards, Democrat, South Carolina; Walter, Democrat, Pennsylvania; Cooley, Democrat, North Carolina; Mahon, Democrat, Texas; Brooks, Democrat, Louisiana; Keogh, Democrat, New York, and Monroney, Democrat, Oklahoma.

In announcing the list, Martin declared in a statement that "the Congress will need all the authentic information it can get on the European and Far Eastern conditions. It will also need the best judgment of first hand observers."

TURNED ON MATE

Constable Kills Razor-Wielding Indian in Court

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 29—(UP)—A 40-year-old ex-convict was killed by a constable's bullet Tuesday when he attacked his estranged wife with a razor blade during a hearing in Justice of Peace Court.

Constable Cecil Baker fired the fatal shot at Jesse James Bourbonnais after the 250-pound Indian whipped out a razor blade and slashed his wife, Ida Mae, 39, who was standing beside him before Justice Otis James.

Bourbonnais died en route to a hospital. Mrs. Bourbonnais' wounds were described by hospital attendants as "superficial." She was slashed about the abdomen and throat.

The outbreak came immediately after the Justice of Peace had ordered Bourbonnais bound over to District Court for a hearing on a complaint, filed by his wife, seeking to have him put under $5,000 peace bond.

On hearing the decision, Bourbonnais, involved in 11 criminal cases since 1933, turned to his wife, brandished a broken safety razor blade and slashed at her. She fell toward the Judge. James leaped to his feet and moved out of the line of fire as Barker, seated near the front of the room, opened fire with a .38 caliber revolver.

Bishop Arthur Moore Leaves Hospital

SHE'S ONLY '48'

Miss Jarrell Victim of 'Hoax'

Daisies don't tell, according to the old wheeze, but Miss Ira Jarrell, City School Superintendent, Tuesday complained that roses sometimes talk too much.

Smiling broadly at congratulations and scores of presents sent by admirers in observance of her "48th" birthday, Miss Jarrell resented the 52 roses, "one for each year," which came from Atlanta's six-member "Bored of Education."

"The roses are so pretty that I'll keep them, but just to convince any Doubting Thomases and Mr. Dilbeck (J. Austin Dilbeck, Sixth Ward Board member and Miss Jarrell's personal friend), perpetrator of the 'hoax', is all wrong in his calculations, I am sending a photostatic copy of my birth certificate, clearly diagramming the time the stork flew with me, to all members of the Board," Miss Jarrell laughingly said.

Miss Jarrell's birthday fell last Sunday, but the story of the roses developed Tuesday.

Grade Crossing Shift Sought

Relocation of a half mile of Lakewood Avenue to eliminate a hazardous and time-consuming grade crossing over Central of Georgia Railroad tracks will be recommended to the Fulton County Commission, by the County Planning Commission, according to Planning Commission Chairman R. H. White, Jr.

The present crossing is at a point where there is frequent switching of cars and the proposed crossing would be about 500 feet north of the present one. White said the Central of Georgia would give the county the new right of way and that the relocation had been indorsed by both the East Point police and the East Point City Council.

Small Motor Blaze Disrupts Traffic

Much smoke and a little fire stopped traffic on Whitehall Street about 9:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Asst. Fire Chief F. J. Bowen said a small blaze in an electric motor in the Arcade Cafeteria basement of Peachtree Arcade had been extinguished quickly after causing very little damage.

Alley Slum Area Vacated

The Clarke Street Alley slum dwellings which drew the fire of City Building Inspector Marvin Harper's office a month ago, have been vacated of tenants, and Harper's next move will be to see that the shacks are demolished.

The owner of the buildings had been given a 30-day notice to have them vacated and torn down.

In a tour of the Alley Tuesday, the Building Inspector found the shacks all vacant but still standing. The owner, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Spear, was not at home at her nearby residence, Harper said.

Citing vioations of sanitary and fire safety laws, Harper last month ordered the Negro-inhabitated buildings vacated and demolished by July 27.

"Those buildings must come down," he said Tuesday.

Mrs. J. C. Haynes, 57, Dies at Her Home

Mrs. J. C. Haynes, 57, of 2251 Sutton St., S. E., died unexpectedly Tuesday at her residence.

Mrs. Haynes, a native of Henry County, had resided in Atlanta for 26 years.

She is survived by her husband; two daughters, Mrs. J. L. Nelson and Mrs. W. E. Webb; a son, Woodrow L. Haynes; a brother, T. M. Knight; two sisters, Mrs. W. Barnes and Mrs. Jack Phillips; three grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by Henry M. Blanchard Funeral Home.

1911 Postcard Turns Up

MATTAPOISETT, Mass.—(UP) A post card addressed to the late John M. Washburn, of Mattapoisett was delivered 36 years, three months and three days after it was mailed in Washington, D. C.

AUNT HET

Jim went back to smokin' only because he was gettin' too fat, but I noticed he grinned every time the scales showed he had gained a little.

JUST NUTS

GRIN AND BEAR IT

By Lichty

"Our survey asked 3641 housewives what they couldn't do without in their homes—1016 said refrigerators, 727 said washers, 1895 said radios, and 3 said husbands!"

TODAY'S PATTERN

By LILLIAN MAE

She'll love this frock with hip pockets like big sister's. A simple dress in perfect taste, Pattern 4507 is a wonderful background for trick buttons. She can sew this herself!

This pattern, easy to use, simple to sew, is tested for fit. Includes complete illustrated instructions.

Pattern 4507 comes in girl's sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, 14. Size 10 takes 2 1-4 yards 39-inch fabric.

Send 20 cents in coins for this pattern to The Atlanta Constitution Pattern Department, P. O. Box 133, Station O, New York 11, N. Y. Print name, address, zone, size, style number.
